[00:29:28] I'm going to call the meeting of the Virginia Board of Education to order. First matter, I guess it's obvious, we have a new participant with us today. We welcome Lisa Coons, the new superintendent of public instruction for Virginia. Because this is really just an executive committee meeting, we will hold off comments from Lisa until tomorrow before the business meeting.

[00:29:49] But I will say on behalf of the board, and particularly myself, we are delighted to have you with us. the interactions we've had so far have been excellent and i think we have a real opportunity to move some things forward so we are very appreciative of your being with us okay uh dr man mr president i move that the virginia board of education convene in a closed meeting for the following purposes the discussion and consideration of records relating to denial suspension or revocation of teacher licenses pursuant to virginia code 2.2-3711a41 of the code of virginia

[01:23:29] the statement of the departure will be recorded in the minutes okay we uh we're going to certify the closed session miss creasy mr holton hi dr siebert dr mann hi uh mr hanson mr sturdifant hi mr rotherham and share both side okay chair will entertain a motion to issue a license in case number one is there a motion so moved thank you man second second uh mr sturdifant uh miss Creasy? Is there a motion? Thank you. Ms. Creasy, is there a second? Second. Thank you. Mr. Sturdifant, Ms. Creasy? Aye. Ms. Halton? Aye. Dr. Siebert? Aye.

[01:24:44] Dr. Mann? Aye. Mr. Hanson? Aye. Mr. Rotherham? Aye. And chair votes aye. I think that covers the business of this morning's meeting. We will be back in full session for the work session at [01:25:04] 1:30 so I understand it. Call the meeting to order. Thanks, everybody, for being here.

[04:02:55] We have a pretty busy agenda today, and so we're going to try to do this as expeditiously as possible. We are delighted, of course, to have Deputy Superintendent, I think it is, Richie and Kristania Brown here from the Wizard of History. The first item on the agenda is the proposed revised history and social science standards of learning as all of us know and most of the public knows this has been a fairly long process longer than it initially anticipated uh you know it's a difficult thing and we had the last staff draft that came out went to

[04:03:31] uh public hearing we appreciate everybody who came and offered comments um it is difficult for the board because under the law three of us can't get together and talk about revisions outside of public meetings and so one of the things that occurred between uh the last staff draft and this meeting is that there was a draft done by certain members or proposed changes done by members of the board that were sent to staff as opposed to being sent to each other for comment

[04:04:05] in accordance with public meeting rules uh and various comments were accumulated by staff which which we appreciate from different board members on the proposed revised draft. But the board has not had an opportunity to review those as a body.

[04:04:24] And that's what's going to happen today. I will also say and take credit or blame for the public-facing document on the website that is with this item. That is the last staff draft of the standards, which is, because of the way our process works, still the sort of official version that's before the board at this time.

And decision was made, I will say by me, after consultation with some other people, to have that version still be the public facing document until it was changed by consensus of the board here today and the vote

[04:05:03] tomorrow. You know, I apologize that a lot of people don't understand, you know, what I think will happen here today because of the way the process works and again the importance of meeting in public and discussing things in public but i expect that as we come out of today people will have a greater appreciation for what the board's thinking is on the standards and hopefully being you know somewhat in accord with where we think we're going so with that having been said uh we've got a lot of pages of stuff my proposal is that we're going to do this essentially uh grade by

[04:05:41] grade we will come back to what has been referred to either as the front matter or the forward or uh however we want to talk about it because there are some other issues there besides standards and the way the process is going to work is i think each board member has got a copy of sort of a proposed revision plus uh comments without attribution off on various lines uh some of which you may want to bring up and some of which honestly after you see what else has been going on

[04:06:15] you may just want to let go by uh the plan is that we will assume the language in the document that is in the body of the document is consensus of the board unless somebody brings up something to the contrary and you know that is not by the way meant to in any way inhibit anybody from bringing up anything they want but i want to have an orderly process as we go through this and with those basic assumptions let's go ahead and start on page 10 and i think we have the ability to put this document uh online yes absolutely yeah and i what i'm going to ask staff to do because again

[04:06:54] i'm assuming let me get consensus of the board on this i'm assuming we're going to start with that the newer draft if you will is that right everybody the draft everybody has in front of them that's the one we're going to start the copy mark review copy for discussion in our board book yes yeah i would like to have that put online if possible oh forgot to introduce it this meeting also our new superintendent of construction dr coons uh and again tomorrow will be the day for the real introduction and you know i apologize to you for not having done this we did it once this morning we'll do it again today and once more tomorrow so you'll feel like

[04:07:31] you know everybody in the room at all times okay chairman decker we'd be happy to put that online for you and thank you for the warm welcome you're welcome okay let's start with page 10 uh kindergarten are there any comments that anybody wants to bring up with regard to uh the items on page 10 seeing none i know i know kidding kidding kidding when i say kidding what i really meant was hopeful hopeful

[04:08:05] okay i'm having i'm having trouble identifying whether oh i see it's marked page 10. yes i have an item for page 10. okay well it's the one that begins kindergarten calling community just to make sure my pagination is the same as yours yeah okay okay miss halton uh i have one proposed change which is not yet fully it's in the the requested edits comment but not in the text of in k2

[04:08:37] k.2b columbus day is mentioned uh and not indigenous people's day um indigenous people's day did appear in some of the earlier drafts i can't even remember what what it was in and what it was not in but i would make briefly make a case for indigenous people's day even though it is not a um in the state code it is in presidential proclamation and gubernatorial proclamations going back for some time period, I believe. And it is important, I think, in our indigenous

[04:09:12] communities that Columbus Day is a fraught thing from some perspectives, from their perspective. And that is why governors and presidents have recognized the need for honoring indigenous people's day coterminous with Columbus Day and would therefore propose that in this grade to end in the other subsequent grades that mention Columbus Day that we add Columbus Day slash Indigenous Peoples Day. Okay. Any comments from the board, other board members? We're going

[04:09:47] to try to do this consensus by consensus. So any other comments or objections to that concept? I just have a question. I don't have an objection per se. And I mean, part of the Columbus Day thing is part of the debate we're having now. These standards evolve. There was a time when country Columbus Day wasn't a thing and Columbus wasn't a thing and then like this constant sort of quest of who's heroes and so forth is why we have it so I have no other than I love a three-day weekend in the fall I have no strong preference I do what is our standard going to be because I do worry we had like the Sikh community came in and said they didn't feel they were fully represented

[04:10:26] we're having in parts of the state how do we include things like Diwali is obviously the Jewish holidays and so my question my colleagues just I worry like what standard are we going to use in terms of and and state you know state recognized it seemed like a reasonable standard I'm open to other ones but just to make sure no one feels like oh now we're prefacing certain holidays and not others and so forth just how do we how do we want to navigate that and I recognize by the way it says including but not limited to as most of these do I feel like I just want to put that I have so I know I've no like hard objection to this but just

[04:11:00] like a question we should we should have a clear operating principle and i'll just respond briefly i think that does make sense and i think the code does make sense but code plus a gubernatorial slash presidential proclamations i think it gives some weight to indigenous people's day and also with respect to indigenous people's day in particular unlike some of those others as you say uh religious holidays etc columbus day is something that is challenging for an important community in here in virginia for reasons we all understand um and so uh you know

[04:11:38] i don't think veterans day gives offense to anybody and i'm not saying that columbus day shouldn't be in but that we help interpret columbus day by combining it with indigenous people's day yeah i'm inclined mr president to support that i think that's important and i'm also aware that just many local school jurisdictions focus on holidays as they are relevant to their student population and there's flexibility for those things to happen um without that having to be sort of legislated from this level in my perspective just because there is extraordinary

[04:12:18] diversity across the commonwealth i'm very aware of those things happening in a number of jurisdictions certainly um in the northern virginia area okay dr siebert i i also i don't have any objection my question is more about this implementation we in k2 but we say um officially designated virginia holidays i wonder we have the parenthetical element next to george washington day commonly knows president's day i don't know if that's in the code or not that's been added parenthetically but i i i don't have an objection i'm just trying to make sure do we need to change

[04:12:54] than that phrase above that if we're mending the list that is currently the officially designated list i just want to make sure that we're i just want to make sure that the board ends up on very firm footing miss holton perhaps a way to a a a friendly uh suggestion might be like we've got commonly known as president's day after columbus day we could put also known as indigenous people day or also recognized or something let me state this in different ways there any objection to

[04:13:31] including a parenthetical after columbus day because i think the point is well taken that we are listing officially designated holidays uh parenthetical that states also recognized as indigenous peoples day any objection to that okay i'm sorry mr gecker point of um clarification just to make sure um that change goes for k.2 1.2 and 2.3 yeah any changes we make i would like

[04:14:09] to consider is carried through the document in the appropriate spot okay thank you thanks for the question all right anybody else on uh kindergarten mr president i had one more that's not a contentious item but just a clarification item that i'm confused by and maybe the department has already figured this out and clarified it but i'm seeing like in k1

[04:14:46] oh yeah in k-1 under civics i'm seeing honesty and showing kindness to oneself and others and recognizing the purpose of rules and practicing self-control repeated twice now it's been it was moved from one place to another but it's now both in k-1 b yeah k-1 i can't tell it's both at the beginning of that section and at the bottom of that section and i think it was meant to be moved from one place to another but it's ended up in both somehow this was a situation miss hulton

[04:15:22] where we had conflicting edits so a board member had added a and b up top and then another board member recommended deleting e so if there are no additional comments from the board on that staff would reconcile that understanding that you wanted to keep a and b we would delete e from so we can kind of assume that throughout that where we've got uh thank you where we've done things that were confusing but it's obvious what our intent is you're going to fix it i am going to say that there will be places as we move forward that they

[04:15:56] meet may need to ask where there were conflicting comments what what that may help and i appreciate miss holton you calling out that there are places where there are conflicting spaces not easier just to keep e as it was and i'm trying to understand what the nuances of the recommendations of a and b even more i i have no opinion which place it goes i don't remember what the change was or why i might have been the one who made it i don't know i hope not but anyway wherever it be we just don't need it twice in the same section but i i thought the edit was

[04:16:34] clarifying and just very active positive stated language reflecting what we'd like to see if i'm translating correctly what was what that is replacing. So, Dr. Mann, you want that the first version of it that what's now the essentially would be B and C rather than the E version of it.

[04:16:59] Well, which version of it do you want? I think what was crossed out is following rules and understanding that not following rules has consequences that was crossed out. Yes. Yeah, but then keep going down below three or four more lines below. There's highlighted practicing honesty self-control and showing kindness to oneself and others that comment vp25 recommends that that be deleted so if you see the comment off to the side recommends that the current i see okay so you think that second iteration is already scheduled to come out okay good so i created us a problem unnecessarily they've already used this just also trying to understand

[04:17:36] why f was uh truck by what was struck i think it got picked up i didn't strike it but i think it did get picked up in k2 no i actually think that one came out in the very first revisions ellen and or grace suggested i think i was guessing it was just because they thought it was inappropriate age inappropriate some developmental okay okay anything else under

[04:18:09] kindergarten you mean the whole kindergarten yes all the kids we just need to spend an hour on each grade and we'll be okay that's exactly my plan

[04:18:36] going to be able to say one down 12 to go so well so again this isn't my uh something i have a dog in this fight but just for staff purposes are you all clear on what we mean on for instance in k3 whether the bald eagle is in or out a3b we have a recommendation to move that to the framework so some guidance if that's the preference of the entire board would be helpful specifically

[04:19:14] referring to k.3 and again if we don't raise it it's going to stay in so i appreciate that kim like that clear but so it stays in stays in unless the board said now says and somebody lobbies for and carries moving into the framework and you know that because there isn't a line through it on the text is that that is correct so for vp31 let's just test my knowledge on this vp31 k7e there's a comment consider moving to grade one given the focus on content and case about introduction to

[04:19:52] maps and glows i mean so it's the idea that that moves to two it will not move unless we right here bring it up and move it like i said the text even the blue text which is sort of a change is staying unless it's changed so we're learning the process yeah if people believe it should be move to grade one now is the time to speak up similarly with the bald eagle and the uh to be clear on that one it's on k3b identifying national and state symbols including but not limit to the bald eagle the dog with the cardinal we're leaving in identifying national state

[04:20:30] symbols we're just taking out the specific examples is that no that's highlighted on my we're leaving them in the whole thing in i'm good with that too unless somebody argues so if the comment is highlighted it's someone has flagged that they want to discuss it if the comment is crossed out we are under the assumption that it's not going to stay in right so if if it's highlighted and you don't talk about it we're going to leave it in sorry i thought i heard say we're going to no there was a suggestion by somebody but we don't know who on the board that maybe it's better off

[04:21:06] in the framework and if somebody wants to make a case for it now's the time yes apparently doesn't like birds it is clearly the anti-avion society that's here so so but now dr mann is asking us to look at k7e just the question of local cities and counties on the virginia map and perhaps this was a part of the 2015 standards and if it was i will just say

[04:21:39] okay um but it just seemed um like for a kindergartner um did he say counties on maps i think it's better suited in first grade okay um it's crazy i know where you are but i just developmentally um i want a kindergarten globe you know there's some things i want them to do i think um maybe finding their locality on a virginia map but counties right and i think that if if

[04:22:14] if the language was something like your own county or city on a map singularly we would that would be fine but um generally speaking i think it's pretty broad and it does i flagged it i just felt like from a kindergarten perspective that is quite i think we have consensus to move it to first grade move it to first grade or limit it to their own i'd just say move it to first grade okay with me May anybody object to moving that to first grade?

[04:22:46] And Cristania, will you be able to help where in first grade we're putting this? Yes, I will. Thank you. Okay, once again, anything else on kindergarten? Nobody, and with no objection, we will move on to grade one.

[04:23:01] In grade one, again, I don't think it's a contentious one, but just for clarifying purposes, under 1.1 civics, we are now deleting practicing honesty.

[04:23:21] what the text she appears to show me is a deletion of practicing honesty and showing kindness to oneself and others recognizing purpose of rules i think that was copied to kindergarten but i don't think ever anybody ever intended to delete it here i think so i think it should be restored but maybe i'm misunderstanding i think what we wanted to do was carry the some of the skills forward in as you progress through the grades that could still be implemented developmentally

[04:23:57] in those same grades so it wouldn't be like we would stop practicing honesty you just don't think it needs to be repeated again well i mean i don't think it matters one way or the other i think you can keep it here and keep it in kindergarten because there's going to be that continual need to reinforce those skills or those you know citizenship skills so i hear you it wasn't accidental it was taken out but you it was correct you just didn't think it needed to be repeated the assumption is kindergarten skills are reinforced in first grade but if it feels good

[04:24:35] to leave it in that's fine those two in particular i just think are so crucial and you know maybe have any issue with uh having honesty in first grade we don't have to say it in every grade but somehow kindergarten and first grade seems worth repeating a grade fair enough all right so we'll put that back you got that one christine thanks anything else on the first grade proposals on 1.3 i would recommend not striking the expressing respect for the american flag i think i know there's maybe a sensitivity to this duplicative of b but i think it's two separate

[04:25:15] things one's the symbolism and the other is respect regarding the pledge i think this was this i'm i just i think that the expressing was changed because expressing can't be measured it's a measurable issue um so it's a different so if you you can prove that you've learned it if you follow just learning about the pledge of allegiance and the national anthem

[04:25:50] actually learning the learning so for example i'm learning it and then i can repeat it for the purposes of expressing respect for what expressing part of the expression is taken off your cover or standing as an expression for the american flag that again with an expression when you talk about expressing respect for the american flag for example when you pledge an allegiance standing

[04:26:26] taken off your cover wouldn't that fall into that category and to me that would be part of what a teacher would be teaching the students as they learned not only the pledge of allegiance but about the pledge of allegiance and that's something here that we can further you know delineate those kinds of things within the curriculum framework if we wanted to add something like that to talk about those particular pieces so the specifics of learning and then

[04:27:00] further expressing could go beyond that but if you guys are married to that i don't i mean i think we need to be teaching respect for that and not just explain the symbolism of the flag but i think teaching respect for the flag so i think it's just a yeah do we worry with first graders we're getting into some pretty flat terrain with this gracie you share that yeah i just think i mean already like even like the pledge like you can't actually require kids to say the pledge that's like well they can be taught to play can be taught but like we're i just think i think we one of these are first graders there's like you know a very lively discussion about how about

[04:27:37] respect for the flag seems like a fantastic thing for high school civics class but i think we need to be we're talking about first graders we need to be really we need to be really careful we need to be respectful of all the views of all parents uh around the commonwealth i would just suggest that maybe we just change the word expressing to teaching i would what about ways people show respect that will fall under expression well first i hear you bill but teaching doesn't work all of these are set up with the student will apply history and skills by the starting doing

[04:28:13] so um it's the the noun the subject of the sentence is the student i think there's probably a way to reconcile this um because again the desire is that it be measurable and and expressing as it's written in this current draft is not measurable but learning about the pledge of allegiance and the national anthem comma you know for purpose of you know i think i think there's a way to i think there's a way to get at it to keep to keep it keep it measurable

[04:28:49] in these i mean in the that in particular is probably an objective if i'm a first grade teacher that i'm going to have in my room on the wall ever all year because that's something we would be doing all year um did you have a wording you're working i just think having the word learning instead of express or learn respect purpose of demonstrating respect at the end of year at the end of the sentence for the purpose of demonstrating respect so learning the pledge of allegiance and the national anthem comma for the purposes for the purpose of learning respect

[04:29:26] for the american flag sure yes you say that one more time learning the pledge of allegiance and the national anthem comma for the purpose of expressing respect for the american flag is what i said that and i see andy grimacing and they need some editing before i think you said for the purpose of learning respect for the american flag oh and i and i'm what i'm wondering is why we wouldn't just make c explain the symbolism of the colors stars and stripes the the American flag, and the ways people show respect, which would include, I think, a reasonable thing for a first grader might be they're going to notice

[04:30:05] why is the flag sometimes only halfway, and then you can explain that's a way that we commemorate especially well-lived lives or terrible tragedies. That seems more like it falls under all of that. Those are age-appropriate questions.

[04:30:21] So that would be, I would suggest we just put it in C and ways people show respect, which would also get why... You take your hat off, stand, different. Just to think, Andy, respectfully, it's two different things. And C is also the Virginia flag, not the, so I think it is A and B, and I do believe A is the Pledge of Allegiance and the National Anthem, which are tied, you're paying respect to the flag, because that's what you're doing when you're singing the National Anthem more, and then understanding the flag historically is a different thing.

[04:30:53] So I just, I think leaving it here, A, B, C, D is fine, just making the one word change with learning instead of expressing as, I think it's two different things. I guess I must have misspoke. I didn't mean C, I meant B.

[04:31:10] Item B is all about the American flag. It seems like where we would... But I think A is understanding the context of what you're learning about the history in B. So A would be learning the pledge allegiance to the national anthem in ways Americans show respect to the flag?

[04:31:29] Yeah. Can you say that one more? I'm not sure. I'm not sure. I do think you've got a point, Andy, But A is really about the pledge and the national anthem, and B is about the flag. No, but again, repeating myself, B is learning the history of the flag, why it has the stars, the stripes.

[04:31:49] A is the context of the importance of it and who we are, what we are, and hide to other things like the national anthem and the pledge of allegiance. But somehow if you can do that with, I mean, just to make the language work. I think you had it the way you suggested it.

[04:32:05] well actually the way i suggested it made it sound like the flag the pledge and the national anthem are all about the flag is there a consensus with just taking the original language and changing expressing to learning so it says learning respect for the american flag by learning i would say the ways people respect the flag and that's a subtle but there is a there is a difference there that i think i think matters what you wanted to add and as i understood it was ways we show respect in the ways people express respect for the flag yeah i think was what you said yeah on it ways Americans show changing on me now all right people well people are Americans whatever our standard or Virginians whatever our

[04:32:45] standard nomenclature is throughout either people Americans or Virginians can you repeat back what you have and make sure it's what we've captured from with the board. Learning ways people express respect for the American flag by learning about the Pledge of Allegiance and the National Anthem. I think it got inverted. I think it's learning the

[04:33:21] Pledge of Allegiance, the National Anthem, and the ways. It's attack onto A. Learning the Pledge of Allegiance, the National Anthem, and the ways people express respect for the flag. And one that should put people and government. Some of the things with the flag are things government, just leave it at people? Yeah.

[04:33:44] Respect for the flag. Yes. It's wonderful to see this wonderful team out here. You guys have been so hard at work on this for so long. Thank you. Do you think you touched on another important thing about consistency? Are we saying Virginians, Americans, people? Because again, I didn't think that consistency is important. You've got to go back to k8 which talks about we have freedom to make a choice about the buy and use that certainly applies to americans but not all peoples in the world but i think there's whatever keeping in context with the course this first grade course is about the state so we can use

[04:34:20] virginians there we get to second grade we can go further out gotcha science teacher thank you i like science too anything else on first grade or a bunch of edits that have been recommended stay yes can i can i raise an issue of course i think you're going to raise this issue um explaining why people use symbols and have traditions something that's a little bit more

[04:34:58] why people have symbols and traditions i think we need to be a little more articulate there so we we need to say 1.3 D explaining why people use symbols and have traditions that changes in the text so that will that changes okay so make sure that that language is struck and added in the text

[04:35:32] so it would stay unless voted otherwise yes yeah we have it okay good okay anything else on grade one excellent grade two starting on page 14. my pagination is different okay okay in uh I was concerned with the impagination came from grade 2.

[04:36:05] Grade 2. I wanted to support 1.5, the comment about combining a list of people in 1.5 under 1.4A. Okay. It was a comment, but I definitely thought the comment made a lot of sense.

[04:36:20] Uh-huh. Yeah, except that it's a lot -- 1.5 is a lot of content, and to just fit it all in under 1.4A seems like it would be -- i also just think from a technical 1.5 is that the heading is change makers and d is

[04:36:58] breakers which i just think it kind of this is all about between the explorers of presidents the barrier breakers that's dan's point this is i mean i think the interesting thing about 1.4 i won't die on the vine here is that it says students will apply history and social studies skills to understand Virginia's history all of these things listed in 1.5 are an explicit way to understand Virginia's history whether you you know call them spores barrier breakers etc it is

[04:37:31] a concrete connection to what 1.4 invites students to do so I when I read it I just thought that seemed to have made a lot of sense when I saw that comment okay is there any other support for that move that is moving one five into one four a i don't see any i see the rationale for it but it just seems too complicated to make it would have to be reworded um a little bit for it to be i mean

[04:38:10] this was something that i had considered um or had suggested that we move those people because you're talking about people and then you go down and talk about people in 1.5 so 1.4 a is about people i didn't know if we could do some sort of tweaking of 1.4 and 1.5 to keep the people emphasis in one section and the other pieces in the next i think it's a good point because actually you're going to need to pull up the one point or the 1.5 a as well because 1.4 the whole

[04:38:45] section is broader historically than just one segment of the four below so i think it even needs to be totally rewritten or and again i think critically important for everybody we have listed here i just think it yeah i don't suggest moving any people out of there it's just connecting the content right the content being together instead of in two separate places resumations we're talking about structural change and content change we just let staff do that work their magic on it we're not taking anything you understand can i ask for clarification so are you okay with us

[04:39:24] changing 1a because it's not i mean it's going to change the labels all of those pieces you could actually just take one 1.4 a out completely because then 1.5 yeah exactly let's see although i think some of the descriptors in 1a might want to embed in the 1.5 line yes yes verse people both past and

[04:39:56] present and change makers or just maybe okay thank you we're basically not taking anything out for combining those two standards correct yes can the team state back what you're doing just to make sure what we are doing is in response to what the board has asked us to do what i heard

[04:40:23] and correct me if i'm wrong we are um combining 1.4 with 1.5 but moving the majority of it with 1.4 a in keeping those um titles did i totally screw that up i got something different yeah i i understand that we are deleting 1.4 a from 1.4 but taking that language and incorporating it into

[04:40:58] 1.5 and keeping the people in a standalone 1.5 with language from 1.4 a i didn't get that at all glad we clarified christine do you have that okay before we go on to second grade okay uh i would like to ask here and and we'll ask subsequently on the remaining grades is there anything pressing in kindergarten and first grade that staff would recommend we address above and beyond what we've

[04:41:36] already done based on you all's hearing of what we the feedback from public comment etc is there or anything we missed that you would have us attend to not for kindergarten i don't have anything highlighted or first grade or first grade okay i think you all have discussed it for holidays yes can we leave first grade then and move to second yes okay promoted yeah let's hope it wasn't a social promotion

[04:42:12] any comments on grade two this will be an auspicious start uh 2.1 a are we where are we are we leaving in expression religion equal protection are they out i can't tell versions right now in my version they're in unless we take them okay there was a comment that somebody felt they should be taken out i wanted to make sure i prefer that they stay in that's why i just wanted to pause okay i would prefer that if they stay in equal protection stay in which is added and i think I think that's how it's written, but I could also see the argument for taking out all three of them, as the comment suggests.

[04:42:50] I prefer to keep all three, but I think others may feel differently, so we should talk about that. The question is, is this too complex and is this too much? Again, if people feel differently, they're entitled to raise it. So here's my thought here, is that we're not giving a broader context of the larger Bill of Rights here, and that's why I suggested pulling those things out.

[04:43:16] I mean, you can give, you can hope that a larger context is created. I just think that it's a little bit complex for second grade. But I think second grader can understand the idea that in this country we have no national religion and you can have your own religion or you can have none at all.

[04:43:37] Like, I feel like we're going to, I think we can teach this at an age appropriate way. We're going to come back and get into it in a richer way later. but for young kids and that laws apply equally to everybody um you know basic freedom i think i think there's a way you can introduce those those do seem like pretty fundamental concepts i guess currently is in correct yes so the question is whether or not anyone is asking to remove it i'm not asking i just raised the issue of what's currently in currently in stays in unless we have but you i do think grace part of your wisdom throughout the document and particularly

[04:44:14] in second grade was remembering that we heard from the field the experts in the field that second grade is just way overloaded and so you're trying to figure out how to you know is respecting the rights beliefs and opinions of others enough for second grade or should we be getting him into a little beginning of an understanding of constitutional protections and and i i i'm not sure how to resolve that dilemma but i did appreciate your efforts to try to respond to what we were hearing in the from the field about it's just too much all together all everything we've done in second grade so whether this this is not one i have a strong feeling about one way the other it might

[04:44:54] be something staff have an opinion or have wisdom for us on based on public comment but also your expertise about what's age appropriate if you all have anything to offer i'd love to hear it the um there is a lot of content in second grade um i think there are some we've had it before um teachers are not probably going to go into the constitutionality of of it all um but laying a

[04:45:24] foundation for them since we have had them um equal protection that's a little more complex than freedom of speech freedom of religion um you guys have anything you want to add but again you can do this this is more schoolhouse rock than con law right like we're not gonna be like you're not gonna be teaching second graders about how the 14th amendment applied you know as equal protection of the states. You're going to teach that the laws apply equally to everybody.

[04:45:53] I feel like this, like there's obviously a way to do this in a way that would be incredibly development and inappropriate for second graders. And there's a way to do it that you can engage them. And I would just suggest we heard from some people who said there's too much. We also heard from some other experts, Amber Northern being one of them, who were like our second grade standards actually particularly strong in giving kids a foundation for later. So I think having these in here. They actually, I think, dovetail nicely. Freedom of expression dovetails into the bottom one of respecting the rights and beliefs and opinions of others. They go hand in glove and free equal protection likewise with respecting and following laws. So I don't think there's a lot of

[04:46:32] extra work here. I think they go hand in glove with everything that's in there. so my question for um clarification equal protection was um requested as an edit an edit to include that's what it's in the document so if they don't cross it out then we're not but it needs a semicolon after it so for instance you all are going to catch that kind of stuff right all right right now i'm not hearing a desire to move it out so right now a b and c are in

[04:47:09] anything else in second grade oh well further down and this is when you all think i'm a monster um 2.10 uh c i think teddy roosevelt should be in under reformers and champions and part of the reason for that is just a little bit later i think i don't think we need to include every park in niagara falls so yeah 210c because i think under 2 uh 12 uh i i don't think we need all those parks but i think yellowstone national park being in our standards is not a bad thing it was the first one uh you know some people refer to our national parks as america's best idea

[04:47:49] you can you can debate we've got lots of ideas but it's an important thing and so those two seem like things we could we could put back in so i'm not arguing for grand canyon rushmore yosemite those are all wonderful places but i think yellowstone is It was Seminole. Taylor Roosevelt is in, right?

[04:48:06] He's back in. Okay, he's back in. Okay. Daniel is done. Daniel is done. Okay, cool. Sorry to slow us down. I'm looking at two. Are we taking the Grand Canyon of Mount Rushmore, if Daniel Paul's out, or?

[04:48:23] They're out. They're out in the version. They're out in the version. Yeah. Another one, I do see a comment that Benjamin Franklin, Benjamin Banneker, and Thomas Jefferson are in two places, and maybe they only need to be in one.

[04:48:43] I mean, they were both scholars and inventors, and, well, some of them were. Maybe it's only Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson that were both inventors and revolutionaries. I don't have a strong feeling about it, so many times.

[04:49:01] I think we should leave them in, and I also frankly think we should— Leave them in both places, in other words. I think the whole context of 2.12 is understanding the history and the connectedness of the geography to our historical landmarks in America. So, to me, just having one listed, you're going to have to teach something as you're teaching that.

[04:49:23] So, I don't know why we wouldn't include the other four parks, but that's. I mean, I think balancing just the idea of new versus, or in addition to, not versus, deeper learning in areas. I just think there is a balance. There are lots of, I think, to have one park represented, and it's the first, I can totally live with that, versus just a list of parks.

[04:49:49] 12 i just that's my thought you can teach about others but you can teach us with the first one and now they do our coast to coast and all throughout alaska but and in second grade i think comes back to the again developmental a second grader um knowing the first national park is one thing moving on to whatever the park around you need more local things versus where now find niagara falls so i don't know where the limit would be put but i think somewhere there needs to be well the problem is where would you put the limit because by definition they're all unique interesting places that's why they're national parks but the focus in this grade level is more specifically on

[04:50:24] virginia no this is right this is the nation second is nation yeah so i think i'm only arguing for yellowstone just because it is the first one it's kind of representative it's when we started okay so it was already in i'm glad you argued to keep it there anybody that is yes no no we don't care about the grand canyon and i apologize i'm surprised i may have had a version of college yeah that's all right we all are very fast and gifted students

[04:51:01] i want to back up to just 2.5 for just a second um again i indigenous sovereignty because sovereignty is capitalized means it's a concept so but my my question is about again second graders wrapping their mind uh i love all the part i did about indigenous peoples the importance of lamb history of culture to them the governance concept seems like it might be a bit of stretch but maybe there's a way to teach it developmentally um i don't know was there any feedback on that that you all heard

[04:51:34] or have we have had um meetings with the tribal groups and they did express um they're wanting students to understand that they are sovereign nations within and because this is um this course is dealing with the united states that was the only um only real rational reason why we have it here another spot for it could be in virginia studies yes or even you know us with that concept

[04:52:12] and since we're this particular um standard is dealing with indigenous peoples and we're looking at the nation not really heavy getting into let's put on a spelling test sovereignty or anything like that but just the uh the idea that they are sovereign nations within a nation and i think the phrase after that including the limited importance of land history culture really gets at what you're talking about is there a i agree that sovereignty seems pretty complicated for there and i'm hearing

[04:52:45] that from both of my seatmates here but is there a word change that would fix it i just heard ellen say was he was okay with it well i don't know christian is explained just with the explanation made so so we're yeah we're not trying to teach the concept of sovereignty but yeah there are sovereign nations yes that's what i understood okay good thank you okay done with

[04:53:14] second under third yeah before before you get past second if i may staff is there anything else in second grade that we didn't address that you all are you all in your expertise i think we should address especially in light of all the public comment in the wake of public comment the main comments that we received and reviewed when it comes to second grade was just the amount of content giving for a second grade teacher with other responsibilities. That's mainly

[04:53:51] where our public comments focused. And we have managed to take out a little bit. Yes. Not a lot. If you had any other suggestions we should consider for other things. It's always harder to take out than to add in. And we have added in some as well. Have you any other language changes to recommend that would help on that? 2.4B in particular, looking at explaining the state's motto, that did come up in public comment also in the image.

[04:54:27] We deleted that. We deleted that. A board member did flag 2.11, just noting that these are significantly difficult and lengthy concepts to teach. I'm not sure if that's something the board wants to discuss today, that is highlighted in the document that we shared.

[04:54:47] I think this was a place that I raised as a potential, it's one of those things to alleviate the significance of the content because these are some, look at 2.11, that is huge.

[04:55:07] That's a big feat in and of itself to teach, to give context on, to really truly understand um it's very broad so i mean that's what i why i flagged um that for hey potentially we might want to eliminate it from here and move it somewhere else for the sake of just the overwhelming amount to be taught here so you would be suggesting moving all of 211 and

[04:55:41] 212 to an a layer grade or i mean i think a lot of those things are um addressed in other grades as you talk about i mean that's like basically asking a kid to memorize all of that stuff and just be able to point it or is there a way to make it is there a way to edit it a little like for instance 211c i mean this is the second grade is about the nation so um the equator prime meridian four hemispheres less important than the countries of north america or spain or

[04:56:20] less grade appropriate and even you could are we doing seven continents and five oceans do we do those in third grade because i would think i thought third grade was the world so maybe maybe a yes i mean again i don't have a strong feeling about this except that i did hear that this loudly that second grade is too much so would a and c be better moved to third grade a and c are basically in third grade they're already in third grade so could we take them out of second grade so second

[04:56:57] grade is going to focus on the countries of north america and the boarding oceans and major rivers and other features of the united states grade appropriate the nation so in second grade wouldn't it just be an introduction and then you learn more in detail when you get in the third right so would it have to be moved well i'm hearing it doesn't actually have to be moved so i would be deleted but but it's just the sheer the sheer total volume of second grade is just a lot well and as i look at it some of these classes have smart boards so

[04:57:36] it's a virtual thing that these kids and it's fun they can see these things on a smart board and i don't know how much in detail but it's an introduction and then when they get to third they've already been introduced to it there's a base that they can take to the third grade so i think we should just stay in i think the challenge though is just the assessment side of it all right because even though there's an introduction that's foundational ultimately understanding it and being able to demonstrate that you understand it will be required and so what is the assessment

[04:58:09] though what is the assessment i'm sorry third grade is the assessment yeah so it's just an introduction thank you well but i don't know what what what local assessments are required if any i don't remember i guess i guess i challenge us to sit here and i know we look at the amount of words that may be within you know second grade and think that it's not that significant from a wording

[04:58:42] perspective, but from going from talking about indigenous peoples and then all the way to the change makers, the amount of time in history that that spans is extremely expansive. And you've got to be able to give students enough of a backstory and context to what you're teaching them and why you're jumping i see it as kind of jumping around in history because you're not teaching every day

[04:59:17] that occurred um but that is a lot of content would would you not agree i would agree and the um the standards the substandards that miss holton um identified contacts with the world in grade three so our kindergarten first second and third grade courses lay a foundation for history social science for the total program of study so they're going to get introduced hopefully

[04:59:50] incrementally to every concept so the introduction of the continents the oceans with context because they're dealing with ancient societies in third grade you have a better context for the continents and the oceans the hemispheres the prime meridian and the equator so all of those will work well together

contextually with what is being offered to stay works well with learning about the nation we're talking about the mountain ranges the countries that are in north america the three

[05:00:27] that's just three there so contextually it's it's not it's not a huge loss because they're going to have this in third grade and they're going to be learning learning about christoni can you point out where in third grade you said a couple of times it's in third grade can you physically find it in the document and show us yes 3.2 and also 3.3 which will look at those geographic

[05:01:05] features of not only the world but also within each ancient civilization that the students we'll be studying. Okay, not to be nitpicky, but I see the continents in 3.2, I don't see the oceans. But again, the course is the world. Personally, if we make the change in two, I

[05:01:36] would love to add the oceans language from two specifically into 3.2. Okay. Seven continents the five oceans language can you detail out what you want so that the team can understand what you're asking for so i i will put on the table a proposal that we in 2.11 a in 2.11 that we delete item a locating and describing the seven continents and the five oceans and c locating the equator the prime meridian and the four hemispheres and that we so that's the first

[05:02:12] proposal, and then the second proposal would be that we add into 3.2 the language about the five oceans, and I would be comfortable adding also the language about equator and prime meridian, et cetera. Yeah, let's pop all of that language that we took out of 2.11, pop it all into 3.2.

[05:02:41] is that sufficiently clear for staff i support it because i like the idea of learning in context the more that we can encourage children to sort of take information in in context the more likely they're going to remember it and find meaning in it so and if prime meridian and equator etc are somewhere else already in three then tell us because we don't need to repeat it but i think i i think we we ended up in the fall we went on a brief path of deviating from the

[05:03:17] concept that we've now gotten back to kindergarten is community first grade is virginia second grade is nation third grade is world i think that's a good organizing principle chris end of geography chris do you have this this one we're sure so we're leaving 2.12 untouched yes well yeah yellowstone is back in that's the yeah yellowstone is back as the board member from yellowstone the National Park. I also just got an email from the Hompkei Center, which I think we all got,

[05:03:57] asking in 2.10 that we replace Dr. Wu with a different figure or move her to an appropriate unit during World War II. Apparently, she had worked in the Manhattan Project, and that is not apparently in the view of the Hompkei Center age-appropriate for second graders, which I would agree with. They suggest a more age-appropriate replacement would be or could include Larry Yid Leong, who was an agricultural champion paired with Cesar Chavez. Dal Lep Sound, the

[05:04:32] first Asian-American actor to the House. I mean, I think, is there any objection to making a swap of Dr. Wu for somebody else, or is there a particular reason we think Dr. Wu is most appropriate for this section where were you no there's uh 210 c includes a reference to dr qian xiang wu just butchered that pronunciation uh and there has been a suggestion again that she be replaced with somebody else um because who's more age appropriate but somebody like senator daniel

[05:05:12] in a way an appropriate figure for that second to that motion well or i i that would be a great suggestion but then they've made others that maybe staff can recommend one to us is that too much i would just like to learn more i don't know the other names that were just referenced but somebody like

daniel in a way is an american patriot and hero and um and i think you know the one thing i that in a way would have going for him is he's been vetted i do worry we start substituting names on the fly without doing our diligence i think we've probably all been involved

[05:05:45] in processes that have sort of gone sideways when someone starts you start learning i'm leery to i'm leery to put a figure in that we haven't actually so i i agree with that but that's why i would ask the staff would they be able to help vet that overnight and help us think about it tomorrow but or all right it's a good idea it's a great suggestion i'd like to learn more but i'd like to also just have that recommendation out there that i suggest i'm looking at the staff the expert in in the space if that is a feasible behind you chris tanya is is that a feasible ask

[05:06:21] given the load that you guys have i don't know that we can vet someone and get this document ready for you guys tomorrow but what what we did have in public comment was that this particular standard itself has a lot of people um in it and really asking the board in some way shape or form to reduce the number and we can really think about the categories in moving maybe people

[05:06:55] into the curriculum framework or but there are quite a few people here in this particular standard where we have a course that has a heavy content load but again but i'm not I don't want to pull out the only Asian American we have on this list.

[05:07:23] Right. So if we were going to pull a bunch of them and put them into, you know, lots of the names in 2.10 and move them into a curriculum framework, that would be one thing, but we don't want to single this one out just because, yeah, we don't want to single just this one out.

[05:07:40] i'd be amenable to looking for a change and maybe we can all do our own little bit of vetting and think about it a little bit later or tomorrow as to who to change to i in a way may well be the easy answer would be a great american to honor on to the comment that was made about the possibility of um reduction i just wonder if there are some people are showing up here that have shown that show up other places there are repeat those people here and maybe create this as an opportunity

[05:08:16] to learn about new people in these categories as long as representation continues to be the through thread it's just one thought that might sort of help us address volume especially if they're showing up other places well at the board that would you all like for us to do i don't i I don't disagree with that, with the exception of I fear that there may be some concern that we are missing important people by the sheer fact that we're not being repetitive.

[05:08:52] Well, you would know better than I how your colleagues might experience this. I am trying to think about all that we're doing through the lens of the experience that happens for children as educators go through the content.

[05:09:08] And so I want to just keep that. it absolutely needs to be within the same realm rather than some you know kind of far out there that would just be my that's a desire there to be able to make that easy connection rather than reaching so far and having to give so much more context behind just someone who happens to appear on a list it's not necessarily connected to the content that's being taught in that particular course i think it's also maybe a double-edged sword where some of these people might have some

[05:09:46] familiarity be easier to learn whatever the reformer or other concepts are to them and then do the deeper dive on those that aren't referenced elsewhere but they'll have a foundation no but then you never get to know about new people right if you're just focusing on the same people all the time they've been different buckets so could we also just get maybe just a little bit and not now tomorrow on miss she and wu because we sort of like pretty summarily were like nope like my i don't know a great deal of batter she was a physicist she definitely you know participated was instrumental in manhattan project um but i think she did some i think i think her work at

[05:10:25] other applications and just to make sure we're not we're sort of pretty quickly rushing to we should learn a little bit more about her and her other contributions i just i just want to reiterate to mr rutheran that we this is not the first time we've heard this comment the organization submitted the same comment before um both back um last fall and um we have met with them twice and so this is not a new comment for us we we are aware about the concerns about this um the inclusion of this particular doctor and you agree that she may be a agent appropriate we will whatever the boards will we can there are alternatives that that we can investigate and find for the board if that's the

[05:11:03] board's will but if she's already been brought up and you all kept her then what does that indicate she should be okay two ways of looking at it if an organization it's one thing to ask staff to work on this but we're also going to ask you to work on a bazillion other things i'm i think that mr hanson's suggestion senator in a way is somebody we all know well enough to know would be a solid choice um maybe we should that maybe that's the easy call so you would so what i'm asking is you want us to vet the recommendation provided in lieu of this person i know my proposal is that

[05:11:43] we change the language to senator in a way instead of this person okay and again back to andy's point about that i think it was andy's point uh i would at least like tomorrow before we pass this to a fat staff take a look and make sure we're not walking into a problem with senator anyway yes we don't need you to vet the person we're taking out we need you to vet the one we're putting in i just i do i mean i think we should be like i think we're just a little quick to the trigger i carry i carry no brief for machine but like there's a reason she was included presumably and there are people who are going to say she was a part of a huge effort that saved millions

[05:12:20] of american lives like i think we should we're i'm experiencing this uh i have enormous respect for in a way i would be happy to have them in our standards but i'm just experiencing this is very hasty which makes me a little just makes me uncomfortable i thought the recommendation was that we might be placed later where it's more age appropriate so we're looking for a replacement for this one so i think we should have both of them understand okay so what taking her out yeah and yeah just the same obvious thing being a physicist as a woman in that time period was probably not like pretty good yeah exactly it was probably not the easiest path and so i think there's a lot

[05:12:57] there's probably a lot there nothing someone from the board summarize what you're asking the team to do so we make sure just at least take a step that i for the recommendation we received from the organization that we all blew out here consider putting her in at a more appropriate third fourth grade i don't know what it would be and i think that's a consensus or representation to find a designee like senator in a way who would be in the second grade one who's senator from hawaii when it was first made a state or congressman then

[05:13:34] senator but also world war ii veteran disabled or special uh anyway just i think that would be an easier age appropriateness for second grade there could be somebody else that people want to sleep on it overnight that was just something that came top of mind again my understanding of staff capacity is we can sort of vet one name and i appreciate the idea only suggesting that in one name for second grade the other i get that but what i'm saying bill is i know anna said i want to add it now i would like again consistent with andy's suggestion that whoever we're going to add

[05:14:09] not that i expect there to be any issue but i would like to have staff at the name uh so that tomorrow assuming staff says it's fine we will throw that in put you know senator in a way into the document uh in place of uh dr wu i know andy disagrees with that for the moment i'm good with i'm good with that moving dr wu to an appropriate world war ii section i'm actually good with with all that mr president i was just gonna make the caveat not like i don't think we want to put on staff like is this person fine or not that strikes me as a very like that's what i just got asked to do but no i would say is there any is there any context we should be aware of is is how i would

[05:14:48] ask that we're not asking you to give a referendum any particular individual but is there any context the board should be aware it's fine and thank you all for doing that okay second grade 2.13 okay i mean when we start getting to man-made things using production it's great don't they just strike machines tools computers buildings or do we move them to like the framework um i just

[05:15:24] got really really granular really in a hurry there so your proposal would be to take what What was your language to you? I like the insertion in green, man-made things used in production. But machines, tools, computers, buildings.

[05:15:42] And you proposed to delete that. That's really big and broad. I don't know how that goes into the framework somehow. What's that about? It could, but this was a recommendation from the Virginia Council on Economic Education. The man-made things language was, but the machines, tools, computers.

[05:16:00] No, no, the parenthetical was in the original document. - Okay, 'cause it's in black. - I think the counterfactuals is simply, I have no strong view except if we don't put anything, if we just put man-made things used in production, is that too broad to be usable?

[05:16:15] 'Cause that obviously covers a universe of things. - I think that's when the framework comes in, but we're kind of doing this in absence of framework, so yeah, I would recommend leaving it. - Yeah. - Okay, we're leaving that one, guys. I'm almost afraid to ask, but one more time, are we ready to move to third grade?

[05:16:33] - Don't ask. - Don't tell, yeah. Okay, grade three, we already have the five oceans, moved into 3.2. Is there anything else in grade three that strikes anybody as important enough to actually make the change? I'm just wondering, is honesty and trustworthiness being struck or added? Yeah, it's only a first grade concept. I thought they were in here. It's in there.

[05:17:03] They were in there twice, so they're struck once. They're in three. Well, is that numbering right that three skills three doesn't have a point one is there something there's that's consistent with the others the skills one doesn't have a point essentially skills is 3.0 that's right so honesty and trustworthiness is struck for the second time in third grade bill not the first time so it's uh 3h that won't be the line yeah i got it okay okay so are we good with uh

[05:17:40] grade three we're still honest and trustworthy yeah when does that change the teenage years anybody else okay great for my question to staff about third grade anything we haven't addressed that based on your assessment of public comment and your expertise I think important that we should

[05:18:05] address 3.3 B Brady how the geographic features impacted loves oh the word the stem of connecting

[05:18:47] and that's 3.3 D yes there was a question raised I remember raising this question just because looking across all the other input we got. The question about whether connecting was a measurable word to be using in this context, this was raised, so I did try to do my cross-referencing of all the good feedback we received, so I just offer that as a question.

[05:19:17] I wasn't able to come up with another word, but I thought it was a good question. - Daph, if you're flagging it, do you have another word you would suggest in lieu of connecting? understanding work. I think it's the idea of taking geography to a historical event and showing the connection to the location. I think that is something we could measure in an assessment item.

[05:19:44] You're okay with it. Okay. Okay. Okay. Grade four. So this is the first grade where the label on the class, I think, becomes an issue. And I have proposed that we delete the language that says grade four here and after here in because we say as I understand it because we are while the while the department is recommending a

[05:20:24] sequence the department is not mandating a sequence and many school divisions currently do not follow this man the traditional sequence for instance some do local history in fourth grade and then do Virginia studies in fifth grade. I remember a lot about what I learned about Roanoke City history, though I think it was actually third grade then. But anyway, we have heard from the field that some divisions are choosing an alternative approach in terms

[05:20:58] of course sequencing. And if we label it here in the standards, then the division that is choosing to teach, as they are allowed to, choosing to teach Virginia studies in fifth grade it will be confusing to the teachers to have it labeled grade four so i would propose that we delete the language grade four in the heading and that we do that consistently for the remaining essentially i think it's all the remaining grades that it is and that that is consistent with where we've been in 2015 and before yes it does we do give more structure than we have in 2015 and before

[05:21:37] because the front matter which i assume some of that will some of that front matter guidance that gives the recommended sequence will remain in so it is more structured than previously but won't and i'm not objecting to that but i am suggesting for the sake of reducing confusion for those divisions that don't adopt the recommended sequence that we take the language out here sorry to be so long-winded about saying it support that how many divisions are doing that

[05:22:11] staff every we have 131 school divisions and it is very rare that it would be very rare that more than 60 of the school divisions specifically have virginia studies for example in fourth grade they may have it in fourth grade they may teach it in fifth grade they may split it and teach it between fourth and fifth grade um some of the public comment that we've received

[05:22:45] is that they have built a local um course about their locality they've built that course and they teach that in either fourth or fifth grade in elementary school so the sequence um would be hard to follow chris tanya just as a personal privilege for a brand new superintendent what data do we collect that actually tells us when the standards are taught and what grade level I know you said about 60%.

[05:23:15] What data source do you use to get that information? The data that I'm using is basically off of, it's more anecdotal from what I know of supervisors across the Commonwealth and what they have expressed to me over the past 10 years.

[05:23:33] And then, Kristania, it flows into other grades as well. Am I right? So for instance, the recommended sequence here has world geography in eighth grade. I think it's my understanding that most divisions are now offering world geography in ninth grade, not eighth grade, or in high school, if not in eighth grade.

[05:23:53] There are some school divisions that will offer world geography at the eighth grade level if they have a teacher that is certified or endorsed to teach that course because it is a high school. It is a secondary course, and it can also be used for towards graduation.

[05:24:12] So we do have school divisions that will offer it as an honors course. But the norm is that it's offered in high school. The norm is that it's offered in high school. So this sequence is recommending that it be in eighth grade. And that's a useful recommendation.

[05:24:30] But says that school divisions, the language in the front matter says, this is what we're recommending, but you can adopt alternative approaches. And so if we're going to tell them they can adopt alternative approaches, some may continue to not offer world geography until high school.

[05:24:52] And if you label world geography as eighth grade when most schools are teaching it or many schools or any schools are teaching it in ninth grade, it's just a confusing errata in the document. and if if i just may add one more point for for context when the 2015 standards were evaluated one of the biggest criticisms is that they did not contain a sequence a recommended sequence for a student to progress from grades k through 12. so this was our attempt to address that deficiency and as you noted the front matter does indicate that it's still up to the local school division to make those decisions but this is our recommendation about the sequence

[05:25:32] so but does that recommend that sequencing that's up front satisfy the needs of the um the evaluators i i i don't know the answer to that question i think we'd have to wait to see miss holden mr president this is i know we're in fourth grade but um this is a really big topic um from a lot of the feedback i have and also the the division i led and the one i serve in currently you know being able to look at virginia studies as a con as a content and move it and do again do it it's required it's a standard but having some flexibility um the world geography

[05:26:08] piece you know i know the division firsthand that chooses you world geography in eighth grade for multiple reasons but one of them is to increase opportunity for students to advance coursework in high school because by getting high school credit in eighth grade you you open up room in your high school scheduled for other advanced coursework cte and ib and advanced placement work also per you know in common with virginia a nice provision we have if you're an eighth grader in middle school taking a high school credit course and you do poorly in it the parents can take it off your transcript so it's a no risk proposition to try to do a credit bearing course in in the eighth grade now i i we conversation we had this day a couple months ago was that but in that division civics

[05:26:48] is taught in seventh grade because civics is a must-have you know so i i think it's a recommended sequence and and and so again whether we do it with a grade four colon or virginia studies parentheses uh fourth grade or however we go about it i understand there needs to be a recommended sequence but i i do i i'm i'm coming here today very adamant that there's incredible work being done in localities to honor these standards but also to honor their communities and the way they built their programs not just for the children in upper elementary middle school to have meaningful experiences but to provide opportunities for cte credentials and a whole bunch of things in the

[05:27:25] high school level so i think recommended sequence is important but there's got to be some elbow room there and nothing we're saying just because i'm confused like nothing we're saying we put it in there as a sequence but the divisions can deviate if they want and presumably we trust them to be able to do that even though it might say grade four if they want a little flexibility they're going to be able to figure out how to do that because they're confident professionals i'm confused why we wouldn't at least give that framework because i do think we need some what you were saying resonates with me dr zebra we just need some cohesion to it so i'm confused

[05:28:01] i'm confused about i'm confused about the downside of of just including it so i'm all for including the framework and it's there but if you the fourth grade standards fourth grade teachers print that document from the state and put it on their website and localities do and they hand them out to the students and if it says four and we're teaching it to fifth graders the fifth graders are going to be confused as well as the teacher and likewise eighth grade ninth grade etc i i think asking an eighth grade teacher uh an eighth grade class to do something that's labeled nine

[05:28:36] versus eight etc i just think it's unnecessary and confusing i think it creates a little cognitive dissonance yeah if we're saying that there is flexibility yet the language and the header makes it clear that this should be you know a certain grade it just i mean i it's subtle but i understand why the point is being made about it and i think what gives me resolve is the fact that all of this has got to be taught there's not a pass on when if it's going to be taught i mean i would be comfortable if it felt if it helped instead of saying virginia studies

[05:29:14] grade four Virginia studies say Virginia studies paren recommended for grade four now but the recommendation and that's based on the information they have is to have it listed by grade grade four grade five and so on and so on yes sir okay that's and but the recommendation is also that local divisions I think it's the department's recommendation that the local divisions have flexibility to deviate it can have a sequence yet they can be flexible in it why take the sequence out in other words they can have a sequence but they they can choose to do a different

[05:29:53] sequence yeah so you can leave the sequence in and the different school divisions have flexibility and and the sequence is in it's in the front matter we didn't get to that yet because we're going to do the front matter at the end but that chart it's at the you know page four or five that lists the sequence quite clearly i think it's helpful but i just i i i guess my point is with Department of Education, you have a lot of professionals that have been doing this for years.

[05:30:22] And as they make recommendations, of course, things change. But in this case, they've made the recommendation to us, and it may not be what every school division may want, but the recommendation is based on the information they have. I feel comfortable with supporting their recommendation. And if school divisions change it a little, that's on the school division as long as the information is taught. I would just have to lean on the recommendation that they've made based on the information that they have.

[05:30:52] - Does Virginia studies, parentheses, recommended grade four suffice for that regard? Is that barring problems or? - Yeah, I'm just, I mean, I'm still struggling. I think I'm missing something here. I'm struggling with what the downside is just to put it and then a division can be like, this is recommended, this is the grade four sequence that the state recommends, but here in Roanoke, we're going to do this or here in Madison.

[05:31:13] - In other words, those pieces of paper are going to be in classrooms all over and it's fifth graders are going to say, oh, I'm not supposed to be in this room. I'm supposed to be in that room Cause you're teaching grade four. I'm a fifth grader. Do you think the fifth graders want to look at that paper and say that? Yes, they do. Our teachers these days use the standards. Our teachers actually have gotten the word that we're serious about our standards of learning. My kids even 15 years ago would come home and say today we're learning 2.15.

[05:31:37] But they are still numbered VS1, VS2 is the good thing as you move through the actual standards. I'm just struggling with the math here. I don't see the downside of keeping it. do see some downside to taking it out in terms of creating confusion that's i'm i'm just struggling with the downside of taking it out i mean you've made a case that there's not i think you need a framework to talk about this and this is what the state recommends in grade four here's why we're not framework no pun intended but like some way i think you need like some way to have those conversations in the community and be like here's what we're doing it says grade four we're actually gonna do this content in grade three or your kids are going to get it in grade five it just gives

[05:32:12] you a way to to structure this otherwise and it's not sure how usable a document it actually is for um i think our professionals can navigate it with that in there i think it makes it much more accessible for everybody else but that's what page nine of the document does the one that lists the whole chart yeah i just don't know if that gets us there i i it's a nice chart of a specific proposal i do or alan i do go ahead well i mean i'll just as long as the flexibility exists i'm good so the rest of this is details my proposal is to delete the language my

[05:32:52] proposal is in the document and it's to delete the language grade four on page but to be clear this is a big decision because we would cascade down through all I proposed to delete that language there and thereafter and alternatively I could live with the the alternative of recommended paren recommended for the grade four if that helps others but my but my motion is no motions yet but my proposal is uh just to delete grade four

[05:33:31] grace how do you feel we're going to do a little consensus here um i just feel like we need the grades there i think that local school divisions within their own wisdom and their own autonomy in certain ways have the ability, particularly the way that we've articulated this in the preface, that we are not making them commit to this, but these are our suggested grade levels. Otherwise, we're sitting here talking about developmental appropriateness for very little reason in a lot of senses here.

[05:34:08] Alan? My must-have is that the flexibility exists. Are you comfortable enough with the flexibility in the forward? As long as we don't mux with the flexibility that exists, then I will be okay. Tammy, I think you were...

[05:34:25] I could live either way. I mean, if we say recommended in parenthesis, I'm good with that. Are you good enough with the language and the foreword being strong enough to indicate the flexibility? Yes, I do believe we have good... Instead of adding recommended here. I could have it in both places because it seems like the concern was...

[05:34:42] Would you be comfortable having it in just the directive at the beginning of the document? Okay. Andy, I think I've heard your comment. Yeah, I think the flexibility and having it in there go into the hands of Mustangs. I'm not going to cut you off. I'm just... No, Mustangs is pretty good. I think they need each other.

[05:34:59] So I hear where we're going on it. When we come back to the front matter, I may want to help us think about whether that language is actually clear enough there. But given if this stays in... We'll come back on page nine, I guess it is. Recognizing that grade four is now staying in.

[05:35:14] We may have to play with the language there. there and i still like this called virginia studies one virginia studies two okay that took us a while um comment 70 though i won't die on the bite about it i just wondered about um honesty and trustworthiness being brought back i know we're moving out of grade three where it was and so maybe we feel like it's implicit with other language i just compared the skills that were showing up in um three versus five and thought the skills for four were more like three than five so

[05:35:49] So that's the only reason I brought it forward, but I said, I say, okay, any commentary on Dr. Mann's comment, horrible to bring it back forward.

[05:36:04] Are we satisfied that it's implicit, bringing back honesty and trustworthy. The expressiveness wasn't great, great under skills. Is that listed or are you asking to bring it back?

[05:36:20] Is it listed? It's not currently listed. I'm asking. back to this one yes h really and it's comment vp 70 i think yes it is vp 70 70 70 70 is the comment vp 70. to include again honesty and trustworthiness it just seemed more aligned developmentally so i thought bringing that forward i support that yeah i think that's a good idea anybody have any problems with that okay team do you know where that goes i was about to ask that

[05:37:06] i think that's an h comment and i think there's a formatting issue with skills via the okay you see that okay okay i thought that that's what i saw yeah i was like why am i tempted to do this now just so i feel like i'm moving along 1607 through the revolution okay it's obviously nothing past the revolution to 1781 so that means

[05:37:42] mr gecker um bs3 there was a recommendation to strike the dates for those documents those documents are listed in code that they are caught and that's the way in which they're listed in code. Yes. We have a code for it. Which ones? Help me out, Christina.

[05:38:13] VS3B. April 10, 1606. And is it only 1606? I thought there was another date too. There's another that's somehow dropped out of the draft we're looking at there are additional charters

[05:38:43] in us-1 and virginia and u.s history so that are codified past 2015 yes yeah so the board requested to remove dates in some of those subsequent sections and that's one of our flags for today that those are specifically included in state code they're listed that way in code that's the only reason why we list the dates right we should make them take a quiz on it correct so you see one here in virginia studies but in us one in that's good yes

[05:39:22] Same thing in civics when we talk about the charters. Ironically, we don't have the charters in C&E. We have the charters in Virginia studies US 1 because it's the charters to establish. So we don't have to reflect it in the same manner. In C&E because you're talking about the documents that led to the Constitution. And the code says we have to teach it, but does the code say where we have to teach it? And is it your opinion that, is it your professional recommendation that this is the best place to teach it or are there

[05:40:02] alternatives? Well, we need to have it here in Virginia studies because we're talking about the Jamestown colony. So in other words, it couldn't be in Virginia U.S. in 11th grade? It is, but we have two others that are also in Virginia and U.S. history. So we have two other dates.

[05:40:19] Okay. But in other words, we can't skip it here and just put it in 11th grade. you kind of need to have yeah okay i trust your expertise okay 17 8 so we're leaving dates 1781 to mid-1800s is this civil war and post war anybody jumping up there yes six i'm another

[05:40:49] mr gecker sure please um vs6 a well basically vs6 we have this is an a we have the heading political growth and western expansion 1781 to the mid-1800s and we have this tricky little thing

[05:41:19] of patrick henry's speech give me liberty or give me death which was in 1775. so the recommendation is to for you all to consider or think about is either we remove patrick henry in the speech or we Change the heading.

[05:41:39] Change the heading. Change the heading? Just change the heading. We're moving. We're somewhere else to move. Yeah. We'll start it at 1775. Yep. Just minor details. Now, can I go to the Civil War?

[05:41:56] You can go to the Civil War. Any, you know, pushing for the comments there? Where does Sojourner Truth live in our standards?

[05:42:14] Sojourner Truth is in U.S. too. Okay. And so we're comfortable leaving it because Harriet Tubman's here. to the underground right so she could really live in either of those two sections but if we feel the coverage is good later fine that was just a question i'm sorry i have to run out real quick or could we look at bs6d where we're striking it because it's expansive but is this the first time we introduced the branches of government the three branches of government i believe it was in third

[05:42:53] grade so we we okay we've already it was brief it's very brief just getting i'm an old science teacher but i know from the middle school civics perspective the more that the more that the branches of government can be i do it in graduate school that's like that that's like a drum i think kind of work tapping um but does it really fit here no being the civics teacher i i don't disagree with

[05:43:27] you however i think it's i mean look if you look if you look at c that's pretty expansive and i don't think we need to get too detailed here as as really content rich as this particular course is if it's in third grade then and then it's again in u.s history and then again in civics and then again in 11th and 12th grade we're getting it to the office but are we still teaching them right

[05:44:05] okay is it is it in fact are we clear that it's a third grade yes okay civil war post-war 1900

[05:44:19] the present we had a couple of questions in reading your edits yes eight was language for

[05:45:00] proposing a new substandard um the question chronologically the um a board member asked so my question is should that be between vs8d and vs8e looking at john mercer elected to um congress in 1890 you said between d and e that's my question yes i believe e has to do with

[05:45:35] plessy and that's 18. that would i would alan that's yours but i would make that yes i would say yes i changed sequence uh i think biological order is good because i have a question on ps11 yeah i'm still on eight but i wasn't sure if you were pausing

[05:46:13] you're you're just going to move it down a bullet was your plan or are you going to put it to ensure that it's chronologically in the right place that makes sense that's good so on vsa like we get into later and we've got some stuff later virginia's readmittance to the union and some of the history around that work i i'm just asking you all for your expert opinion what we have here is enough coverage in grade four and we should hold back some of that more complicated material until later and that we don't need to worry about including that here yeah okay okay cool my next question

[05:46:46] is with vs10a comments down by 11 but yeah it's vs10 again this uh the i'd like to hear from the historians and the pedicure the the the experts here about you know the world war that that the comment 85 so it's comment number 85 that um other than knowing the world war one is a precursor of World War II, that World War I in itself could be a pretty deep dive here, but I'll lean, look over to the history teacher.

[05:47:24] So what would you propose to do differently? Ask the history experts for their recommendation, like raising the team. And maybe this was in there in 2015, maybe it's fine, it just seems like getting to World War I there is a lot.

[05:47:48] Yeah, it's a lot. It is a lot. Because you're not giving any real context. It's not particularly Virginia history. I mean, it's definitely a precursor of World War II, and some of the people there, but I...

[05:48:04] The board have a preference in dealing with this era because we do move, basically, reconstruction going into the civil rights movement. If we wanted to lighten up World War I a little, do you have any language suggestions?

[05:48:20] They'll lighten up World War I a little. I think reduce the burden of how deep you go in this grade, in fourth grade, in what's recommended for fourth grade. I think, you know, noting that World War I is a precursor to World War II, but yeah, I'm actually moving on a scientific method.

[05:48:45] Maybe combining them with the reference to World War II, the World Wars, and then World War I as a precursor and getting into, you know, I mean, I did wonder about the reference to Jacqueline Lucas because there was a comment about maybe she was from North Carolina.

[05:49:04] Yeah, I want to pause on that. People came, you're right, Dr. Mann, and some people thought it was a big dunk on us to say that he wasn't from Virginia. In fact, his Medal of Honor is accredited to Virginia. The question is, there are lots of medals of honor from World War II accredited to Virginia, and I don't know that we want to get into weighing the various heroics. Every one of of them is a fine American. So I think the question is, how should we, do we want to put including Medal of Honor winners from Virginia? I could be mistaken, but I think that group number is like eight or nine, including my first class Lucas, or do we want to leave somebody in?

[05:49:44] I think there was, there was some confusion in the public comment about why this person's here. They are from North Carolina, but their medal is accredited to Virginia. But how do we want to, I think, I think it's a discussion with the board. How do we want to handle that and how do we do our privilege one particular medal of honor winner over the other was a number there's a number of them accredited to virginia for world war ii don't because the standards as a student will understand the major roles virginians play maybe that's why north carolina maybe that's why it got called out if he's not if they're

[05:50:23] thinking about that in the purest sense those metal is accredited uh so i understand i'd be comfortable with that i think the question is do we want to name it seems curious we're naming one medal of honor winner when there's multiple ones do we want to name or do we want to list them all i don't think we want to list them all if you said they're eight or nine yeah there's a there's a i don't remember offhand but it's a sizable number i think it's also maybe teaching more appropriate maybe the medal of honor winners what they did versus what one individual did it

[05:51:00] might be a better learning about medal of honor winners from virginia and it's also a chance to learn about the medal of honor i'm actually sitting over here with quite a bit of heartburn just stressing over just the expansiveness of the information, the expansiveness of the time period that we are teaching here. And I do think that we have a chance to hit World War I and World War II in later grades in greater detail. And so I would actually maybe make a suggestion that we

[05:51:35] remove BS 10 as it is right now and put that information in later grades that can support some more expansive dive into this so that we're not just literally scratching the surface on this stuff, but we are giving it the due depth that it deserves rather than just pulling it out the sky and making this decision because we want to cover all of these this time period it's so

[05:52:12] crazy it's here only it's here only because we want to raise up the virginians who were significant in world war one and world war ii but world war one and world war ii are appropriately covered in us too they're covered in world history too they're covered in virginia u.s so in 11th grade so maybe these Virginians, maybe we could add notation to these Virginians in those other grades, but it really does end up being just one more thing that Virginia studies, it's not fundamentally

[05:52:51] about Virginia. I mean, Chesty Fuller should be talked about somewhere, but I think he could fit into U.S. too, or if he's not already mentioned in U.S. too, and he may not be, and he should be if he's not here but kristanya what do you think about that so to remove the vs10 and these people

[05:53:22] introduced in other courses but make sure they're all included later they um definitely look at the curriculum frameworks and i mean with joe wilson of course i think we're saying even like in the standards not just the framework and they're in the standards and and i think and if we did that we have to decide do we want to on the medal of honor where do we want to put for world war ii you would learn about all the medal of honor winners from virginia which really that's not there's plenty of resources where it describes each one that's not overly laborious and as part

[05:53:58] of that process you learn about these different places you learn about italy and you learn about iwo jima and you learn about um uh other fighting the pacific so it's kind of a good way to teach through these stories i'm just looking back at virginia studies from 2015 none of this is in here and not no mention of world war one or world war ii in virginia studies virginia studies it's all virginia history and i think it's also important to remember that we are all we're assessing at this grade level which means yeah the teachers are in fact held accountable

[05:54:35] for the content all right so where are we going with this i think a good argument has been made for um transitioning it where there's greater attention to the depth and quality of instruction around it versus just a mention of it in the context of a course that really is about virginia history i think given a number of other places um these wars are addressed and the people therein

[05:55:07] have you know um served nobly i think a good argument has been made just while we're on virginians who serve nobly could could become just something about you know virginians playing a role without, you know, maybe it's the Medal of Honor approach or something. The idea of service appeals to me here. It's just trying to make it relevant or we're going to teach them all about World War I and World War II. And that's kind of where I'm struggling. Well, it looks like these

[05:55:39] Virginians or people close to Virginia, they're named specifically for their connection here. And the greatest honor in the world can get us the Medal of Honor. So that's why I think their names are there they made the greatest sacrifice um during that time period that's why those names are stamped there it would be great to in my opinion leave their names there as well as have a conversation about them later if if we can um at any time a virginian receive the medal of honor but i think it it emphasized during world war ii those individuals in world war one and two

[05:56:20] their connectivity to virginia um and i also i just think there's a balance and i'm not trying to add new content per se but when you look at the previous two sections of the civil war and this is a 40-year section critically important to um country and our commonwealth and i think having maybe at least this light level of a touch with you know the patriotism or what was done

[05:56:52] And one thing I also feel like is just missing is that I think the key role that Virginia did play was the whole Norfolk area in World War II. And it seems like that would probably be one of the most important things that's missing here, is to explain what our role as a Commonwealth really was during that critical time and how I've held upon to do things that have never been done before.

[05:57:23] it's created such an important part of the Commonwealth. And that was really the transforming moment of that part of our state. Mr. Hanson, I wonder if the comment you made earlier would get us to a compromise point, because I think that the notion of what Virginians did in service to country and the kinds of recognition that can come along with that, i.e. the medal, is a conceptually easy thing to wrap your mind around.

[05:57:54] And I'm hearing the concern is because we are emphasizing the wars in particular and the content that goes behind them, that that's where you feel like you're getting short shrift. So I think that the point you made about service and what this represents and how Virginians have served,

[05:58:18] Maybe there's a way to get at that and the emphasize specific reference to the war so that you don't have this sense that they've got to cover content that really isn't the focus of a Virginia study course, but more, I think what you described, I mean, I could see that as a nice compromise to the way it's currently phrased.

[05:58:41] I think it also dovetails to VS-11, and we're talking about kind of the next 50 years or whatever, and these individuals and what they did from our social and political events and whatnot.

[05:59:01] So I just think they're maybe using the framework of 11 to put together 10 for the first 50 years versus the second 50 years. I like that idea, just rewording it. breathe now that was wanting to recommend that thank you for staying at the streets so the role of virginia um played in during this period in the honor of service old war one ruler two exploration i think there's a couple of things there it does seem weird to jump this 45 years basically more really i don't want to throw another concept but i think the

[05:59:40] depression but at that time period was incredibly important to the commonwealth of world war one the depression world war ii and created the foundation for the next 50 years so i think just a way to bring that together simply though okay it's a complex year simply into one little thread easy ask sonia so i nod and smile and you so what are you writing down what's the elegant answer

[06:00:13] based on um what mr hansen was saying and looking at vs 11 um something very similar to where And he also mentioned different areas of Virginia and from Tidewater.

[06:00:30] So getting everyone to Tidewater and looking at the role Virginia played in the war effort. And then the second part of it, looking at how Virginians served.

[06:00:47] And then the people that we have here listed, maybe more so in the framework to where the standard is very broad. and the people and their medals and you can even talk about medals of honor um within that narrative within the framework did that capture what you were talking about mr hanson hanson could we get clarification on that because we did have a board member say earlier to keep the individuals in the standards and not move them to the curriculum framework so could we get clarification from

[06:01:18] the board on that as far as keeping individuals by names that's right and the standards individuals listed in the actual standards i would say the one addendum which i would just say medal of honor winners from virginia rather naming a particular one the names are then in the framework yeah i agree and then there's i mean again there's resources we want to direct people too there's like pretty ready-made lesson plans for this but like i i think so are we agreeing to puller should be games are going to the framework and i think we're not agreed on that that's why i mean

[06:01:57] that was it that's the statement in the form of a question or a question in the form of a statement mr author it sounds like some names are going because you're agreeing that the especially because the the one medal of honor person well i think we either list tomorrow we list none it's a lot to list them all so i would suggest we list none but list the let's say medal of honor winners from virginia and then i'm fine with keeping the other names but others may feel differently from an assessment from an assessment point of view you got to make sure that those people are at least in the framework because you're going to want to put parameters around that to make sure that

[06:02:36] everybody is rightfully so these names can all be lifted into the framework plus the other seven just put the medal medal of honor winners in the framework we could look the others these names listed as well i think we should probably break that we're getting confused let's first decide what we want to do about the medal of honor winners and then we can decide about the other names i think we're getting confused we've been at this for a little while speaking of world war one that this has a world war one like quality to the uh yeah so mr rotherham there are 50

[06:03:13] medal of honor winners in world war one in world war ii i thought it was fewer than that world war two i'm mistaken from world war ii and two okay okay then i'm mistaken then that's a chat yeah that's a that's a lot i mean i think we should talk about the value i thought it was substantially fewer in World War II. I mean, teachers can like choose one from their locale. Yeah, yeah, or to illustrate again, you can illustrate different parts of the world with it.

[06:03:51] Okay, so let's reset. We have a standard which will replace VS-10 that will deal with Virginia, Commonwealth of Virginia's role in getting ready for World War I and World War II as the first part of the standard and then the second part of the standard is dealing with um service in particular

[06:04:20] medal of honor recipients virginia thank you virginia medal of honor recipients and chesty puller is he going to be there erica's most decorated marine but he's not he should be somewhere in our standards i would think because he is from virginia yeah from virginia so i'm correct with the standard for vs10 i think you should say it one more time one more time yeah

[06:04:54] so the standard um reflective of how vs 11 is written virginia's role in the civil rights movement it will be virginia's role during this time period and we'll list the time period and then the second part that would be the a and then the b would be discussion of medal uh virginia medal of honor winner recipients and service military service conceptually when you say

[06:05:32] medal of honor people we're talking just the concept of what yes what that is the idea that and what samples could live in the framework as examples but not as things that are right yes Mr. President, maybe we can take a little break and pencil that out.

[06:05:54] Yes, and I'll read it back to you, Lika. Thank you. That'd be great. Bless you guys. We'll accept that. Thank you. Four. This is the part. Yes, actually.

[06:06:10] Would you pass these around? Well, and some of them, like, some of them. They're commercial marching ones. Oh, would you pass these down? We talked about them. Oops. Sorry, I forgot you.

[06:06:23] i think we were in virginia 1900 to the present and you are going to come up with a suggestion

[06:21:44] that made the board exceedingly happy yes so everyone be happy the student will apply history and social science skills to understand the role of virginians by examining how key leaders and citizens prepared and then b describing the contributions by military veterans and medal of honor recipients i can live with that everybody okay those names will be listed for the names will be out of the standards but into the framework into the framework um mainly in b

[06:22:23] right okay well we're applicable because we're talking about preparing for the war so we'll see okay okay let's roll on thank you christina all right i had one more question um

[06:22:44] there's disenfranchisement it is yes 11a bs 11a um a suggested edit explaining the social and political events connected to disenfranchisement of african-american voters in virginia um maybe consider another word for disenfranchisement or virgin for fourth and fifth graders nine and

[06:23:23] and ten-year-olds. We use suppression somewhere else. Yes. Suppression of African-American voting rights. Would you like to go with that? I would be comfortable with that. I'm there in spirit. I'm not sure what word we're going to... Well, I'm open to alternatives.

[06:23:46] Suppression is better than disenfranchisement. Right. Well, let me ask. If I'm the fourth grade teacher, right, and I see disenfranchisement in the standards, and I know I don't have to teach the word disenfranchisement what do i tell my kids depression you tell black people couldn't vote in the south from 1902 i guess my question is really geared to are we expecting kids to learn all the words in the standards or are we expecting teachers to teach the concepts in the standards right in which case i mean the average fourth grade teacher knows what disenfranchisement is

[06:24:25] True. And would be able to convert that to fourth grade speak. But I'm not pushing for disenfranchisement above suppression. But in terms of when we say the fourth graders don't know that word, I'm not sure they have to know that word for what we're doing here is the point. yeah and the only reason i do sort of like disenfranchisement because i think and and maybe a mystery it it seems to suggest both formal and informal methods of vote suppression which is why um it is but again that's not like a hill i'm gonna die on but it seems broader to me okay so we content leaving disenfranchisement oh i don't know are you yeah i'm either way thank you

[06:25:04] all right there was another um question the inclusion of harry bird he's in there later he's in a later grade where is he now in virginia us i think it's the us would it be adding him after the three court cases or i mean where you know he was part of that disenfranchisement he was also running the state you know it was all kinds of ways but but but fourth grade versus a later grade. I was going to say, is that something, I mean, does a fourth grader need to know Harry

[06:25:43] Byrd or do they just need to understand that there was a period of time in which black people were disenfranchised? I'm not working, I'm not advocating to make, if that was my comment originally, I'm not pushing it for fourth grade. I'm comfortable, he's in elsewhere. Okay. He used to be in a big way in fourth grade, but it was Which, was that a recommendation you were bringing up?

[06:26:06] no sir that was a question that was in who else so i i guess if it was a i thought the way we were doing it if the board member didn't bring it up or raise it we would just continue on i thought the board member had to bring it up well if staff has clarity clarification questions so the staff wanted to know whether or not we would use that word it was included in the comments so that's why she's asking she's saying there's a comment that was in that was created by some uh board

[06:26:38] member and we need to investigate that further also the next comment about the 16 individuals listed maybe grace to an expert is that a lot of people to include or i don't know whose question that was but i think there were five people listed in all of virginia u.s in all of virginia studies oh i see that's the that one's but that one's out unless we put it back in i think that's the same

[06:27:11] with 87 though right yes all right i'm not sure so my understanding for 87 is arry bird is out um i admit back to the historians and the folks on the board um i mean when i teach when i teach school law for graduate students you know i use the new kent county case and some others and i think if i lived in new kent county i would use it i think from virginia's from national perspective i would definitely want to teach brown v board i don't know have we historically listed out the

[06:27:41] other virginia cases um look at the first part of comment 87. we haven't we didn't do any of this in the prior virginia studies i don't or any of the court cases were listed so let me ask this question as we if we list specific court cases are we saying that they can expect an assessment that includes knowing the names of these cases and i think the answer that is yes right and do

[06:28:17] Do we really expect fourth graders to know the names of these cases? Brown v. Borg. So, Alan, are you proposing a deletion? I just wanted to check where people were on this one.

[06:28:33] Well, what if we put Brown v. Borg? Could we move the other cases to later, because I do think that they are important. No doubt they're important. Oh, very important. And I also think they could be in the framework for this grade level. If it was your locality, that's rich and powerful.

[06:28:49] But, you know, for all parts of the -- children in all parts of the Commonwealth in fourth grade, you know, I think that I -- I like that, Ella. I think we ought to stick with Brown and then put the other two in the framework. Kristine, are you comfortable with that? The green case and the -- Prince Edward case in the framework for this standard.

[06:29:12] For this grade, yes. Yes. And then we come back to them later, correct? Yeah. How did you do New Kent? New Kent, I don't believe New Kent, but I believe Prince Edward in BUS. Everybody good with that?

[06:29:33] All right. Are we on to grade five? Before that, maybe we've heard them all already, but is there anything else staff feel strongly about based on your professional expertise and your hearing of the public comment and grade four that we haven't yet attended to?

[06:29:52] Those were my main questions. No, ma'am. Thank you. Okay, grade five.

[06:30:11] We've already resolved, I think, the request of deletion. We don't need to do that every grade. So is there anything else that has been requested that somebody wants to champion? I will be the Scrooge and champion US-11C, I think locating the 50 states and their capitals.

[06:30:35] I know that's fallen out of favor, but it's a way to teach geography. I know it can be a little confusing, but actually I'm bored with that. I mean, the 50 states is a separate question from the capitals, right?

[06:30:50] Right. So, yeah. You want both? I would like the capitals as well, but again, I'm only one board member. I agree. I agree with that. I think kids do it. Grace, you have any thoughts on that developmentally? I mean, when I was elementary principal, I'm seeing fifth graders sing nifty 50 United States and holding up their states, and they had them.

[06:31:12] My concern is having them here in the standard versus in the framework, the capitals explicitly now, because now we're creating an assessment of 50, we're creating 50 assessment items for the capitals. The test is getting my own. This is the issue, I guess, with doing these independent of the framework.

[06:31:33] I mean, I personally would be content with it in the framework if I were sure it was going to end up in the framework. Can we get that assurance? Yeah, I'm good with it. Well, we can agree amongst ourselves. Now, the frameworks are going to be voted on by a different composition for us, but we can agree in spirit.

[06:31:52] Staff can agree to put them in the draft of the frameworks. We're good with the idea of having them in the frameworks. We're putting a pen in it. Asset agreement. And killers are kicking it. I think that's a great idea.

[06:32:09] Okay. Framework. Well, no, I think they can memorize it. I'm not sure that we want that to be the assessment items that we focus on, which is the difference. Okay, anything else?

[06:32:27] Hesitate to ask in grade five? I'm sorry. Oh, excuse me. No, it's grade five. It is still grade five. I lost that battle. I lost that battle. So, BP 93 comment, this isn't geography.

[06:32:58] This is early culture. it's just locating where indigenous people live as opposed to something more helpful explaining i don't know i'll leave that to the social studies people the explaining touch on the geography piece of it more is the idea or what standard are we looking at um us 1.2b okay locating versus explaining grace any questions locating and explaining yeah i would i would actually go with locating and explaining thank you okay is there anybody who objects to that

[06:33:39] okay page 26 nothing popping up there 27 okay oh i thought i was at an elementary school okay that's fine great a little confused um i'm looking at us 1.7f

[06:34:19] Major accomplishments of the five. Yes. Okay, just wanted to make sure. Yep. Okay, so we're good with grade five. Staff, anything important to add that we missed?

[06:34:51] There was a question on US 1-6, inclusion of Phyllis Wheatley, Abigail Adams, Christmas Addicts, James Olmestead.

[06:35:11] The comment says, what about the inclusion of? So you're just asking clarification. it was not added to the text unless somebody jumps up yeah when i'm asking i mean if you need clarification great that's a good time to tell us but i'm also asking anything you all in your expertise recommend we change our app we move on middle school grade six they're going to give me a participation trophy again that's what he's saying 50 50 years all right grade six

[06:35:58] anything here that people are still i'm still catching up okay that's fine okay so this is where the um in in uh us 2.2 all of that is under effects of reconstruction that doesn't belong there

[06:36:36] along i think it belongs under us two five or should be a separate section but i i'd be the easiest change would be to move it all all of f to us 2.5 this is on page 29 according to the department pagination i think i might have a requested edit all of 2f should be moved doesn't

[06:37:15] I've got it here, okay. You know, housing discrimination via redlining is not part of effects of reconstruction. It's also effects of reconstruction is essentially the time period after reconstruction, but before the 20th century is what everything else in there is.

[06:37:38] So I actually would move everything, excuse me, in F and G would move to US 2-5. And I think I've only flagged US, I only flagged F, but on further reflection, G should also go us-2-5 is my suggestion you go to us-2-5 you have a discussion of where they go

[06:38:15] thanks yeah then i got where's it moving to though maybe after maybe after um well after a i mean frankly there are a number of items in us-2-5 that are not entirely chronological so like i would take i i would put it in i would go what's currently a then i would do the great migration and you could do it after that and then prohibition and then

[06:38:49] come back to the red scare later so miss holton i think you're asking for two move f to us to five and then revise us to five to be chronological well we could do that yeah i like i like both of those quite a bit to move fng to us-2-5 and then reorganize us-2-5 to be chronological thank you to the best you can and you know i mean some of these things took place over a lot of different times but the red scare rise of communism was clearly i think mostly it's it's yeah little

[06:39:26] it's out of order it's a little out of order i mean i don't know all right go ahead team are you clear if you still have deliberation i'll wait

[06:39:49] are you guys clear on that move for f and g into us i'm seeing head shake yes great okay so i had a question because h it says explaining how the presidential election of 1876 ended reconstruction and and some of the feedback i read someone was questioning the accuracy of that um statement i'm just lifting it up because it was content specialists experts bringing it forward and i

[06:40:17] wanted to erase it um and then i missed bringing forward under the skills engaging and communicating as civil and informed individuals with different perspectives like there was this previous skill that talked about engaging and communicating as civil and informed individuals with different perspectives and i just thought that should be carried forward it was introduced in the prior rate the skill it did get more sophisticated as we went on but i definitely thought that was

[06:40:57] worth carrying forward and not falling off if i'm not mistaken was it in five yes it is h in five it's gone in six and it's there in seven and it's there in seven which made me want to have it in six there's no reason we shouldn't yeah okay and then i didn't know if there was a point of view on this this question i i don't have my other draft that i just took note maybe it was a

[06:41:27] collaborative draft well i wasn't sure about that either so i asked a history guy division and so i'm just going to read this and see how it sounds and so for this would be for h currently it says explaining how the president's election 1876 ended reconstruction the proposal

[06:42:01] would be explaining how the presidential election of 1876 resulted in a compromise that removed northern troops from the south um now again i like that i think it means northern trips already left some states well and also have we actually ever told these sixth graders that there were northern troops in the south in other words that that level of specificity may be complicated that's going to come as a shock. Well, after the one. We got a lot of questions about age,

[06:42:38] so I don't know if there's a way to improve it. Yes. Maybe the history people in the room have a way to improve it. Any staff for historical? I think this also goes back to President Gecker's point. I assume our teachers are going to recognize, people say the elections in 1876 ended reconstruction shorthand for the political deal to resolve the stalemate and then our teachers will have that background and kind of get what we're talking about i think it's a little different i mean i tend to defer when historians and people are saying there's something wrong with this we should look at it i just made a note is this true should we look at it i if there is a better way

[06:43:17] to cast it so that it accurately reflects what the intention is i think it would be good to try and do that as opposed to a concrete statement that might be misunderstood as fact if it's a bit more nuanced. About saying something like impact of the end of Reconstruction.

[06:43:34] Yeah. Led to something like led to the end of Reconstruction. How about that? Led to the end of Reconstruction. That'll be short. Ms. Brown, did you have thoughts? Explaining the role of the compromise of 1877 and overthrowing Reconstruction governments. Or just say explaining how the presidential election in 1876 led to the end

[06:44:07] of Reconstruction. That's pretty tight. Say that again, Grace. Explaining how the presidential election in 1876 led to the end of Reconstruction. That in three words. For sixth grade?

[06:44:25] In U.S. 2-3, we've now added the rise of organized labor in both what's now B and C.

[06:44:44] And I would delete it in B and leave it in C. Is C in the blue new or what is this? Yes. You're saying delete and the rise of organized labor in B because it's already captured in C.

[06:45:06] Correct. Assuming C stays, right. Assuming C is added in. And just you don't need the phrase rise of organized labor repeated in two immediately adjacent sections. Ms. Holden, you said delete it from B? That's what I would do. That makes sense. Delete and the rise of organized labor.

[06:45:29] I think I have a little bit of a problem on some of the reference. Oh, it is. What? Temperance is misspelled. And in C, it's S-W-M-E-N apostrophe S.

[06:45:47] There's also some capitalizations. Can I suggest that, like, when we finish this and we vote on it, we vote on it with a caveat that it will then have a professional copy edit before it goes out? Staff heard that?

[06:46:03] I'm happy to ensure that, yes.

[06:46:17] They're also in grade six. Catching up, catching up. That was the copied comment. That was the copied comment.

[06:46:37] That's fine. We're happy. We're happy to correct it. Yeah, we're happy to correct it. Are we done with grade six? I think so. And then I was going to ask my staff comment. Any anything else in grade six that you think we should attend to? If you would. Yes. Two. What is it? Three. Three. Three. Three. This broadening to be more inclusive of all immigrants. And when we're talking about the Chinese Exclusion Act. Chinese American and other.

[06:47:18] immigrants. Yes, ma'am. So where it says in F, it currently says cause harm to Chinese American immigrants. I'm sorry. I'm looking at the home key. You know where this one is. Yeah, that's what that was working. It's in U.S. 2.3F.

[06:47:52] Chinese American and other immigrants. Yes. I'm comfortable with that. Other people. just saying immigrants just immigrants well you could say cause harm to immigrants i would i would feel more comfortable chinese american and other immigrants because they were certainly the primary targets of that deserved to be acknowledged as such that's that's all for us too christina can you read that back just for me please sorry yes chinese americans wait a minute i'm sorry um

[06:48:30] explaining how governmental actions including but not limited to the chinese exclusion act of 1882 caused harm to Chinese Americans and other immigrants. Great. Thank you. Oh, there is one thing at the end of U.S. 2-9 that's, like, incomplete.

[06:48:46] Somebody has added in a U.S. 2-9 science and technology since the turn of the century and says student will apply history and social science skills to elaborate here. This is the one we discussed yesterday, that we need help writing this. We were unclear on the comment, and we need some support from the board on what was intended there.

[06:49:08] I think the idea here is that a lot of our teachers, sometimes after the SOL test, after they've gone through all this content, then talk about the innovations of this century.

[06:49:36] And it's very exciting and relevant to kids. It's people they know. It's very representative, the contributions of scientists, engineers, and innovation. So it may be too tall of an order to build that out today. And the other thing that helps is, you know, and maybe it's maybe gets people nervous making it, leaving it open, or maybe you try to address it more in the framework, but it adds to the shelf life because there's going to be innovations in the next five years, you know, before we come back to these standards again.

[06:50:08] So that the idea is an opportunity for young people to see what's happening, exciting in the world today. So do you want something like the students will apply history and social science standards to continue to study the iterative innovation and advancements in science and technology and just leave it broad like that?

[06:50:29] OK, yes, that one done remembering one more. I want to say that again. The student will apply history and social science standards to study the iterative and ongoing advancements in science and technology.

[06:50:55] And if there's cleanup, feel free.

[06:51:06] Within that same standard, there was a requested edit to move E, I believe, having to deal with, starting with the Apollo missions, the moon landing, into the above standard.

[06:51:31] The above standard, US 2.7, deals with transformation and foreign policy, and those movements were all domestic. Kristani, which standard are you in? I'm sorry.

[06:51:53] US 2.7. Okay, so we're going back. We just finished 2.9, so we're going back to 2.7E. Because it was asking us to break it into three different standards, and in doing so, moving E and F into 7, and they're originally in 8, and 7 is foreign policy.

[06:52:23] I make a friendly amendment that we keep the Apollo missions as role of the United States, defending freedom, all of that, because there was obviously an enormous foreign policy component to the Apollo project. Okay. The rest of it, I agree, is obviously all domestic.

[06:52:42] I also think if we're doing this, I stand alone on the Cold War with the ABCD underneath it. We're missing the most important part of all of it. That is Reagan-Gorbachev ending.

[06:52:58] of Cold War. And we referenced Kennedy and Khrushchev at the hub of the beginning, but that's probably the most important. I don't see it anywhere. I thought it was. I thought they came later. Maybe it's in a different grade. I know. I could have sworn I saw it somewhere. Well, if we could teach Kennedy and Khrushchev, we could teach Reagan and Gorbachev and the result of the Cold War ending and why and how it ended, what it led to.

[06:53:31] this world too there's a standard so are you requesting a G sorry it's where is it now he's 31 no but I mean I'm sorry staff is saying we do address it somewhere else or no we do point ten yes actions of Gorbachev to Ronald Reagan Margaret Thatcher and we do it but we don't do it until a high school bill so

[06:54:09] the question is do we want to do it in middle school as well i would say absolutely know why we introduce the subject of the cold war and don't give the conclusion to our students so the length right exactly the language from world war 2.10 d or some some facsimile thereof grace

[06:54:45] what page specifically I would just pull up age 51 world history 1110 D and keep it simple you

[06:55:41] could just maybe include it to work a job Reagan at Thatcher and don't include the other two but it's just a little simpler sure for that purpose you need to include thatcher either i think for what you're talking about bill yeah i agree yeah we're gonna keep it simple for the first time exactly right right i'd also just ask on e of why we're including the epa and

[06:56:13] other governmental entities or whose recommendations are we again bill they added language under us yeah i think it was taken out somewhere and put in somewhere else yeah it was taken out eight and moved up to seven so this was existing language that we moved okay

[06:56:40] but again i'm wondering why there's a whole slew of great society programs created in the 60s and more in the 70s it's not a whole lot about the environment though and significantly obviously major happenings in this period about the environment leading up to contemporary issues

[06:57:12] with climate change. Unless we deal with it more actively elsewhere than I remember, I think some reference to the EPA. My beautiful clean river out here that we are enjoying the birds in so much wouldn't be there. The EPA is in here elsewhere. Yeah, I just wondered to Mr. Hansen's point, the specific call out of it here it just it does read interesting um if there's maybe there is a

[06:57:45] historical reason for having it here called out as such besides the fact that of course the environment is important well i mean it was here because this was i mean nixon's era that was when the nbpa started it's one of the clean water act and clean air act and why we as i say why i can swim in my river here. Not everybody would swim in my river, but I actually am searching environmental. I don't see the EPA anywhere else in the document. I don't even see anything

[06:58:22] about environmental laws anywhere else in the document. It may be there. Well, that's not true. There's an environmental protection requirement. There's a reference to environmental protection in 12th grade, but that's the only other reference I can find. There's environmental features describe major physical environmental features, but that's, unless I'm missing something.

[06:58:51] I just, you know, at the time there was more of the movement of Earth Day and other things, and if we're talking about, you know, movements or something, I just would prefer that versus giving credence to government agencies or entities. Well, if there's a language change that captures, you know, the beginning of the important actions of that period and beginning to environmental stewardship I'd be comfortable with a language change but leaving it out I would give me I think there's something like the women's movement of comma environmental stewardship or something like that would

[06:59:29] be fine with me what's the specific language how would it read establishment of environmental protection laws and agencies or laws and organizations? I guess the concern is are we selective of one and leaving out others?

[07:00:06] Well, we're leaving out like the EOC. Nixon founded that. Department of Education was founded in 79. Well, we're leaving out lots of things everywhere. It's something that shows where, I mean, a huge, our current generation understands that our environmental stewardship and the crises that we're handing on to them are a huge part of contemporary America. Some reference to our beginning to address these issues. So I'm comfortable with a language change, but I think that makes it different from some of the other issues. And there's plenty of talk about education

[07:00:40] in lots of different places. Yeah, I think environmental stewardship, I like the concept more so than the calling out of an agency again, because there is a recognition. Okay. So what's So the establishment of environmental stewardship laws and environmental, because it's not just movement.

[07:01:08] I mean, there were major laws. Can we just call it environmental stewardship? The establishment of environmental stewardship. I remember when my kids were learning this, I recall them being taught was about the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts as the springboard into the overall discussion.

[07:01:25] Maybe that's the way to do it, creation of the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts. Yeah, instead of the agency, perhaps, the reference to the acts, then you can... And the passage of, instead of establishment, the passage of... Yeah, whatever, but just conceptually, it seems like a better springboard to me.

[07:01:43] I agree, we're broader. Does that work? And the passage of Clean Air and Clean Water Acts?

[07:01:58] I could live with that. Again, I just, I think the other parts of this and throughout are talking more about movements and such but not i mean we do talk about ada down below and um yeah and if it fits better down below i don't have any problem with it where it goes miss miss holton just building on that comment so would the board be comfortable with us moving it back to a so it's not under the foreign policy standard eight i'm sorry i would i don't think this had anything to do with the

[07:02:36] changes that you've already discussed so you're saying just remove it and put it down in the contemporary the EPA out I think where you had I just I've moved it back I would recommend back down to eight because this is more of Kent temporary versus the Cold War location I'm okay with either way and I think it also just describing protections and provisions of the American with Disabilities Act you get that same description of protections with provisions of the clean water and

[07:03:09] clean air act or something like that so like Andy said Apollo needs to stay in

[07:03:18] 2007, right? Didn't you say that? I mean, I think it could probably live in either, but it was definitely part of the Cold War. Yeah, it was. What was, Andy? I'm sorry. The Apollo Project. Yeah, I mean, it pulled, you know, teaching about Sputnik and the arms race. We have one more. Werner Von Braun is actually buried in Virginia. A piece of trivia for you. Alexander, not far from the school we were talking about this one. It's your trivia. We're showing our age when we consider some of these events contemporary for the case.

[07:04:00] Does it need a different header? Is there a different header? Second half of the 20th century or something? Remainder of the 20th century. Is it all 20th century or some of it moves into 21st, I guess?

[07:04:21] 9/11. I did have one clause to add into the... I was going to propose an addition in the 9/11 phrase. Do you want to deal with the heading? Yeah, I do think it may need a different heading.

[07:04:37] And I do think even though it was 2001, I think a lot of people sort of think of the attacks as sort of that was the bookend on the 20th century. So I think we can finesse that. But it does seem like they had. I agree. So the heading before nine is since the turn of the century.

[07:04:52] So, you know, coming back to contemporary America and doing something about latter 20th century or something. Yeah, latter 20th century. I'm just spitballing. can we look for a second at the stem of us 2.7 okay we can you can look at um anything that a whole it's still talking about foreign policy the stem is about foreign policy right so

[07:05:30] we've agreed to move all that stuff out we agreed to move all that down to eight okay okay i missed that's that's what I was trying to clarify it okay and then we I think we have a recommendation to call this latter 20th century instead of contemporary America is that correct historians weigh in on that day we are happy to take a different give us some recommendation don't have anything in

[07:06:08] around the year 2000. I thought the world was coming to an end. Dr. Sievert seemed very good. The last thing I believe was recommended was science and technology. Is that heading?

[07:06:25] Hang on, Kristen. We're still working on contemporary America. That's what I was going to say. This kind of all fits under contemporary America. We wouldn't need an extra. You missed our concern that having all this 1960s, 70s stuff contemporary america it feels like contemporary america to us old people but not to our students not to why would you just call it what alan suggested latter latter half or latter part of the 20th century because that's what it is so now we're just talking about changing the headline contemporary america to latter 20th century approaching the turn of the century or

[07:07:02] or something. Approaching the 21st day. We want to put our standpoint called best years to be alive. The 20th and 21st century. The wonder years. Here we go. Late 20th, early 21st

[07:07:20] We're going back to 911 on that. I have a 911 comment. Go ahead. No, go ahead. I just, it's more of an edit of just describing how the events of 911. It's not and the heroic, I would say, including the heroic sacrifice because of yes.

[07:07:50] Yes. My suggestion would be to add at the end of the phrase and including the impact on Muslim Americans. It was significant. Mr. Hanson, we did not repeat any more. I'm sorry, I did not catch it.

[07:08:15] After the parenthesis of 2001, put a comma, including the heroic sacrifice of Flight 93, comma, and the rest of it's fine. And I just think that could be embedded in the language of

[07:08:41] domestic policies and global perspectives on um yeah yeah i think i think there's because if we we i mean we could get into the effect on muslims which is certainly a legitimate area but then there's lots of other i mean these policies have lots of different impacts sort of and surveillance policies and the difference drowning yeah muslims specifically but unless we're going to broaden what we expect to teach to sort of the societal impact as opposed to just the language changing

[07:09:16] policy. I would not be averse to changing the domestic policy language to the impact on the U.S. society in general, and thereby subsuming all of it. Oh, say that again. How would the language read?

[07:09:32] Oh, I don't know. Something like... And its impact. And its impact on, you know... Go ahead, Tammy. Well, you were talking about just society at large. Society in general. us or so after passengers you would say and its impact on american society yes i would include if we wanted if we wanted to expand to begin a discussion of impact on groups which again legitimate impacts on a lot of folks and i understand the impact specifically on muslim

[07:10:06] but it also had impact on you know privacy on privacy with all the you know stuff that went on you know of the eventful things in my lifetime right it would probably be berlin wall 9 11 in terms of major societal shifts i just want to make sure one of those can change domestic policies doesn't really capture in other words i don't think changing domestic policies fits with and impact on muslims i think you can talk about changing policies and the impact on

[07:10:41] various u.s citizens would maybe say domestic policies comma societal and global perspectives on the war on terror you said no it's not all about that no that doesn't impact on privacy on muslim americans maybe we could bring this back up for the high school kids i think for sixth grade this is heavy stuff it's enough to teach them about what happened on 9 11 and i don't think we have to identify specifically Muslims. Everyone was impacted by, and yes, there were more

[07:11:17] laws put in place to protect the nation as a whole on any threat, not just Muslims, anyone. But the impact on Muslim community went way beyond it. Going back to the prejudice that many Muslim Americans felt.

[07:11:32] Well, you mentioned felt. And experienced, experienced. A lot of groups have experienced things in this nation, but I don't think specifically with that, there was an attack on our nation, 9-11, and you're saying a certain segment was impacted.

[07:11:55] I think every American was impacted. Absolutely. So I don't think we have to specifically name a subgroup. But we can talk about the impact on various elements of the U.S. population. Yes, on the U.S. population. Yeah, and again, to me, that's a little bit different in terms of concept than the focus on the changed domestic policies.

[07:12:14] subsumed in it perhaps but it's not clear enough that what we want to talk about why wouldn't we just say american society then which would include domestic policies that can be in the framework and then i think we need it didn't change global perspectives on the war on terror created them the construction of this entire item is a little grammar i have a suggestion why don't we why don't we say describing how the events of 9-11 including the heroic sacrifice of flight 93 passengers significantly impact impacted domestic policies and global perspectives on the war instead of

[07:12:50] just changed significantly impacted it's the problem is it wasn't just policies it impacted society but here here's the other thing that i think we have to think about and this isn't so much so the large the the topic in general and who we are teaching it to so this is middle schoolers sixth graders they are particularly prone to um bullying picking on each other the i think the

[07:13:27] more that we put these topics in a place where it could be exacerbated in other areas and i think this is a topic for older kids to talk about those societal impacts um i just worry about i mean i have a sixth grader myself so i'm i'm not against it i'm just saying i think it needs to be discussed more significantly about those impacts in a later i don't want for our

[07:14:05] content to drive more current issues within our schools i i think you bring up a really interesting point i really appreciate your unpacking that in that way and i guess as i was thinking about it i was i was more in a direction of how helpful it is for awareness for students to more or less understand there are many things that are different that they may not understand why things are the way they are this is an opportunity to concretely sort of tie how you know there there is a balance

[07:14:45] that struck between national security and you know personal freedoms and i i think those kinds of examples are are better when i when i heard the word societal i was thinking more in that way you know how we go through the airport is all different it's just a lot of those things were the result of an experience that happened and i think being able to kind of connect current events with how it changes the way we live and operate and our democracy feels like helpful so that's

[07:15:24] where i was when i heard society i was thinking in a developmental way because i think the points you bring out about what is true developmentally about where middle school students are it is a challenging period of development and we don't want content to unintentionally create um more um yeah i i will tell you appreciate that was one one particular comment that was made by a student during our public hearings that resonated pretty significantly with me what was the

[07:16:02] it was about um being different in a classroom and that it was sensitive content that then was turned around and was she was targeted by students in her class because of the content and that's i mean yes we we deal with sensitive content all the time we we but we also have to be able to talk about it in the ways in which i mean we live that was a lived experience for all

[07:16:32] of us right and we are then teaching it to kids now who weren't alive then and so what is i having her comment in my head really just gives me some pause to talk about that at this particular age

but i think if it's societal societal can be very much make it broader society broader how we live and i think focusing on that dimension of it because they may not understand you know why is it that when i go to the airport i feel like you know i'm getting undressed every time you know

[07:17:11] there are reasons for why things have changed, you know, over time. And I think being able to connect events with how we live is a part of what history and social studies ought to afford young people.

[07:17:27] So I have, here's some language maybe that helps. It's also maybe helping on the grammar on this sentence. Describing how the events of 9/11, comma, including the heroic sacrifice of flight 93 passengers comma i'm sorry just start again describing the events of september 11th comma including the heroic sacrifice of flight 93 passengers comma and the impact on domestic policies american society and the war on terror that's a lot cleaner yeah like that can i maybe

[07:18:06] just suggest one added on the very beginning just the word events troubles me um this was an attack and an unprecedented attack on our homeland um actually created attacks the attacks of september 11 terrorist attack it was a terrorist attack so i could fix it describing the terrorist

[07:18:41] attacks of september 11th comma including the heroic sacrifices of flight 93 passengers comma and the impact on domestic policies american society and the war on terror yes yes it does have terror twice in the sentence in different ways it's good you mean because terrorist attacks is a yeah i think that's fine different usage i asked already on on us two one more time please

[07:19:14] one more time are you guys ready yes describing the terrorist attacks of september 11th ran september 11 2001 comma including the heroic sacrifice of flight 93 passengers comma and the impact on domestic policies, American society, and the war on terror.

[07:19:44] Lost the how. What was I describing how? The whole point was how the events changed. I think we [07:20:10] still need that. The impact, domestic policy, American. Lose the how. Does that end grade six?

[07:21:00] And can I ask for Stania the Holton question that is now known? Anything we should have done we didn't do and you want to ask your way just so we can be sure okay right seven civics and economics

[07:21:31] for christania does that mean that your previous comment about the date under the charters must we have all three in here in um yes we must they're listed that way in code so so was there an

[07:22:02] an amendment done to 2015 then 2015 there um not listed that way i got here just charters i'll have to check when any admit if an amendment was done but we've listed it that way every since because of the way that it's listed in code in all of our documents i'm i'm confused as to the draft on what's

[07:22:42] that uh ce6 is it not you know what's no so ce6 was moved up however that's not an effective way to switch it so we moved one back and don't pay attention to that you know what it is and christiania understands it and that was my question are you moving ce and just go back to the way it was yep yep thank you yep and we didn't lose any of that content but we're going back to the way it was but with the new content which appears on page it said okay we get to 34 good god yeah we moved

[07:23:21] it up then we moved it back there were edits to six i assume ce1 we need to put dates back in

[07:24:14] is that correct yeah distancy of the question of traits ability trustworthy honesty courtesy

[07:24:53] respect for the rights of other personal responsibility and a review this question was raised enlisting in the military is not a trait there another way i mean patriotism and service in one's country it could be taken to express that as opposed to um enlisting enlistment

[07:25:19] as a trait so i guess you could even service in one's community and the country or okay we can that country in there and we'll take out a blister in the military yes so delete enlisting in the military and add um service in one's community um and or country yes to get a military service

[07:25:55] you said to take military service out uh yes only because the way this is written it speaks about rates more or less and that's not a trait but i do agree that service in one's community or country it's better with the rest of these characteristics that are called out so under the citizen citizenship and civic life yes i'm just talking about c7 where there's a specific call out to enlisting

[07:26:31] in the military and i'm suggesting based on a comment that was made about that particular phrase to represent it in a way that's consistent with the other descriptors there so it's not in other words in other words character traits public service right in listing in the military is not a character trait so you can say it's public service yes i think what mr henson said in service of m1's community or country i mean when we talk about service of country that is by

[07:27:08] definition serving in the military whether you're enlisted or commissioned right or couldn't you shorten it and use mr certifan's comment it was just public service could you just take out service in one's community and more generally say public service that covers local state and federal yeah yeah we could do that but that doesn't necessarily get it i think the enlisting and military i think that service to country service the country is about military public service one doesn't need to be in the military too maybe if we put it service to country and community then it's a

[07:27:47] little more i think service to countries okay with that service to country and community okay i want to see that lifted up my brother was i'm trying to lift it up too so serving in the military instead of enlisting yeah i when i read that comment i thought about the character trait piece but it really didn't give me the heartburn because i gave him respect for the law that's it

[07:28:26] that's a choice that i hope people make and and so i don't know respect for the law was a character trait as much as a choice whereas enlisting and choosing to serve is a choice so i i saw i saw the comment it just it didn't give me as much degree of pause but i'm actually fine leaving it the way it is with enlisting in the military can we drop the word character traits in some way and maybe get at all these things and just because i think you're right about some of

[07:28:57] the word character or you could say the student will apply history and social science skills that if that exhibit effective and respectful participation in civic life so to describe the character traits and remove that so

[07:29:24] remove to describe the character traits and then replace enlisting with serving okay anything else in grade seven keeping up on this yes we just want to make sure we capture that

[07:30:02] you know remove to describe the character traits and replace enlisting with serving good can you read it back to us make sure we have it i'm maybe i'm right i've lost the thread to apply history and social science skills that exhibit effective and respectful participation in civic life including but not limited civility trustworthiness honesty and honesty courtesy and respect for the rights of others personal responsibility service in the military self-reliance hard work respect

[07:30:39] for the law patriotism and service in one country one country community nice okay grade seven going once going twice uh have we asked my question the whole thing question anything else you all think

[07:31:05] we need to tend to okay grade eight the idea of changing recognizing with analyzing regions and

[07:31:35] change recognizing to analyze yeah and all those regions there it's about yeah recognizing it's pretty low level once we're at the world geography like the world get a little deeper into it page

[07:31:59] 40. 129. and you want that to carry down yeah team do you see that it's it's all the way through the sees great else there look like all right great oh that was all world geography is that what we

[07:32:36] just did yes uh anything else from staff any other no good i just like to say on the skills section adding the geospatial technology and all that that's i think that's hugely important

[07:32:56] all right uh great nine deep in this quick revisit i'm wondering if now is the time move grade nine into parentheses at the end because really once we're in high school it's about taking courses and getting your credentials for your diploma and all sorts of

[07:33:35] orders but do you think that the feedback we received in 15 standards applied to high school sequencing as well um that's applying the grade for the course yeah kim i want to make sure we don't need anything for essa or our essa plan that's a good flag superintendent i would need want to double check that as well. Again, not a big one. World history one is where we are now,

[07:34:15] right? 0.8C is deleted driving the role of the trans-Saharan caravan trade. I couldn't find it. It says it's deleted because it's already included in six above. I couldn't find it, so maybe that's just me i'm outside of my territory here so the reference to the cultural oh yeah

[07:34:58] not the same language maybe the same concept i don't i'm out of my territory i don't i don't know whether that adequately addresses it seems to be e c goes beyond what was above but i and staff have a recommendation on whether c actually adds useful content beyond what's in

[07:35:33] six above useful and appropriate content or not your question again was about 6d no it well the

[07:36:28] question is about world history 1.8 c which has there's a recommendation that we delete c because it's duplicative of what's in six above and my question is what is staff's recommendation opinion as to whether C contains important content beyond what's already in 6.

[07:36:54] Because 6 above doesn't expressly contain this language. The question is, is this needed? Is there any change needed to incorporate the content of 8C? Or is 8C, you know, basically subsumed into what is in 6?

[07:37:09] It is not. Okay, so it's a different area? There's two parts to the question. One is, is it subsumed? And your answer is no, it's not. And so then the second part of the question is, is what's in C sufficiently important that it should be in there? Yes. So dealing with the trade routes.

[07:37:26] So I think we should, so I'm recommending that we undo the deletion of World History 1.8C. Yes. Unless somebody else helps me understand it better. Okay.

[07:37:41] So we're going to undelete 8C, which is what comment VP 134. 6WH 1.6.

[07:38:07] There was some comment Terry raised about the reference to the word rule. I wondered if there was a better scripter. They can lie to some of the other things we've spoken about regarding the narrative associated with certain groups.

[07:38:29] I'm just bringing it up as a part of the review. I am on page 44.6D. So World History 1.6D. um describe the expansion of territory under Muslim rule so the word rule control either one Kristanya we have used a different you look this up I actually looked this up yesterday what other word have we used consistently through the standards not necessarily a word but to make

[07:39:08] an edit to where it would be describing the expansion of territory treaties in the spread islam and arabic language among the people in the terror in these territories because that role that you're talking about is assumed up in the expansion of the territory that way we don't have to get into rule and aggression and all of that but do we imply wordsmith these were this was a colonizing activity so do we i mean do we need to like are we are we trying to imply that like

[07:39:47] everybody living in moorish spain was just voluntarily happy to be there i think we need to be i think we need to be a little careful i i appreciate the sensitivity but i think we need to be we just need to be a little we just need to be a little careful like or you can think about rain um i think control or authority authority might be too harsh i think control when you're talking They say Roman rule or Roman authority.

[07:40:18] We say Roman rules, but we usually, at least, not using the shorthand. Not in the standards, no. Unless you want to make that change. Okay. Although you did see, I do think we should teach all 12 Caesars because that would be some engaging. Is that your comment? That would be some engaging content.

[07:40:34] I should have guessed. I should have guessed that it was you. That would solve our chronic absenteeism problem fast. That's the thought of it. Is there a song about all 12 seizures?

[07:40:52] No, but I mean, so with that rule, then what's the, I think we need, and I worry control or authority creates like too much of an organized. They ruled it. They controlled it. That land area. They controlled it. Yeah. And we have the word expansion when I read the edit.

[07:41:09] So if you want to change rule to authority. Yeah. It wasn't a nice time. It wasn't a nice time. There is a song about that. Istanbul or Constantinople.

[07:41:25] Nobody knows, but the Turks. It was not a peaceful time. More for the plebeians in Rome, either. So we could just leave it? Leave Rome? Yes, okay, so what I'm trying to do is, like, as I reviewed all of the comments, i'm just trying to lift up things that were striking to me just in an effort to give you know voice to the things that have come to us so i think that's fair and nice i guess the question is are people objecting to the use of military conquest because the rule really follows the

[07:42:01] fact of military conquest which is the aggressive action and i think we have here is both it's the spread of islam which which many people that was a voluntary activity for many people we shouldn't apply otherwise, and military conquest. The construction of this sentence seems actually good to me, but I'm the guy who thought there was only eight Medal of Honor winners from Virginia Woolworth too, so take that other grain as well.

[07:42:32] The only flag that I have is that that language is not used with any of the other societies in any of the world history, so just to give you a heads up on that. and what is the language we use yeah i mean we want to be consistent so in rome we mainly rome greece and rome and it's mainly about expansion use it or spread when we're talking about

[07:43:05] their religion and culture um bring up another society with military conquest is the word military conquest that's this is the only expansion wow yeah expansion or spread

[07:43:39] yeah we do use conquest and other words in other areas so this is the only place we use conquest or we're using we use it again um and it's with islam in another con period let's say the roman empire we don't talk about conquest we just talk expansion expansion spread i would certainly be open in that case to changing this to expansion of territory we don't do ruling of another society

[07:44:18] over another the word rule and we don't use the word rule because it's just not it just hadn't in all of our different revisions that society over other societies we've just not used that terminology in the past with any other um societies or civilizations other than muslim or islamic

[07:44:51] rule alexander the great but i don't remember much about him that's just what has come up i can i apologize i can't give you the rationale from the 0108 standards but we've not used rule with any other societies other than islam and that came up also in public comment it's not something that stood out to me the last revision also i am finding one other just searching the word conquest there is one other use of it right above this section but alexander i'm sorry yeah with world

[07:45:29] history 1.4 we refer to alexander the great conquest of greece the formation and spread of hellenistic culture okay it's a thought i mean it's an important point it is i really appreciate you leveling it up when we did ask if you you all had anything else you thought we should attend to the only other thing um and we can address it now and you all make your decision it'll be for

[07:46:04] moving forward, the changing of CE versus the use of CE versus AD and wherever we have it. I'm sorry. But I keep meaning to ask about that. So what's your, what you all's recommendation? What's the, there must be an expert right answer on this.

[07:46:24] There actually is. And I've tried to look in, looking to see where historians were using and it's there's no rhyme or reason behind it's very the only explanation i found was that ad just had a religious and um intent because of the latin but it's been around so it's been around so long exactly so it was originally put there um with the august document the the small committee

[07:46:59] recommended it recommended ab ce long time ago but just let us know ad is fine that's what's been there all of this time 2015 has both okay let's not do both let's go back to the rule question i am honestly i just look back i'm uncomfortable with the idea that the only people of what we say were involved in military conquests were Muslims.

[07:47:36] - The use of the word rule. - Well, in military conquest, the only other conquest, honestly, here was Alexander. - No, we talked about that here, though, later with Native Americans. I do think we come back. I think we have an issue with this.

[07:47:53] We have an issue with this particular language here, but we do talk about that idea elsewhere. - What idea? - This idea of conquest. We had a discussion. saying here is only with the muslims doing does it appear that we talk about their expansion of territory uh through military conquest it it describes what was happening as almost like enslaved right no i get that so my point is though that other societies also expanded territory

[07:48:31] militarily we don't describe them in the same way it doesn't appear to me that we describe them in the same way well i do think there's similar i mean the previous section on the roman empire there's like a persecution alexander the great's conquest you know there's in american history there's a lot talked about arcs anyway i so is there other any other word we can use

[07:49:09] like for example world history one five we talk about the origins beliefs customs and spread of christianity including the persecution and eventual adoption i mean we talk about like spread i think i i think i'm less concerned that we somehow this is we've only singled this out as the only conquest and more concerned with whether we figure out what's what's the right word to describe it well i think she offered expansion as a way to do it consistently with the way we talk about other societies and i that feels like the right thing to do and not have one group's similar

[07:49:46] behavior characterized in ways that we don't ascribe to other groups that just doesn't feel balanced but we still need a word though there dr man because we say describing the expansion of territory under muslim right now it says we need we could in fact keep rule and then eliminate the next couple words and say in the spread of islam and arabic languages among people in these territories yeah i guess i don't know why i'm not troubled by the rule word but the rule word seems

[07:50:23] okay appropriate let me see if i have consensus here then we'll all i want to do is eliminate the phrase through military conquests and treaties uh and have it read describing the expansion of territory under muslim rule and the spread of islam and arabic language among people in these territories but i don't you know then the rest of it and the religious culture yeah yeah absolutely yeah that seems reasonable it seems to be a little bit more consistent with the treatment of the others yeah and solves the problem yeah but rule does doesn't trouble me that

[07:51:00] okay go ahead we haven't heard are we okay with that okay all right all right are we done now with great nine going on to ten i'm good ad i'm content with a.d

[07:51:50] next we're going to do numeracy instead of literacy We're doing math next, Grace. We're going to get you. We'll bring you up the standards. My pages are so wrong on these. Okay, great 10. Anybody have any comments? I see the staff edits.

[07:52:17] Nobody's going to change it. Huh? I'm doing a great time. Hang on, we're going awfully fast. Everybody good with 10? Is there just a reason in the Arab global war is on page 50, just at the bottom, with Hirohito, Hitler?

[07:52:34] Stalin is not mentioned as a, what is it? WH-29. Yeah. Very relevant and evil of the day.

[07:52:51] I think it's probably important. We need to have Stalin name. Absolutely. Whoops. You guys have that. 2-9. WH-29 at the bottom of page 50.

[07:53:08] Just after Hirohito or in between Hitler and Hirohito, had Joseph Stalin. Had Stalin. no Mussolini oh well if we're covering I know we might as well just my personal is it he was subservient the other three of the global I'll give you that and I want every 10th grader to be able to spell

[07:53:47] all right so are we done with ten have questions any any anything giving you any heartburn we should hear about any suggestions great 11 thank you i think i'm on the right page isn't it between both

[07:54:20] i have some items in the us to vus.3 of a that language something got mixed up about that language in the edits so perspective of africans who were captured and enslaved the americas they weren't captured in the americas perspective maybe i would propose alternate language perspectives of persons who were captured in africa and enslaved in the americas

[07:55:06] sorry and where are you exactly 54 which is page 54. okay you could just say who were captured there and then enslaved yeah it's right now it sounds like they were captured in the americas africans captured americas i mean maybe i'm just being grab a grammar way down we're captured there and then enslaved so my proposed fix would be i mean i see why somebody didn't want it to be brought to the i see the problem with the prior version but perspective of all

[07:55:38] persons who were or people who were captured in africa and enslaved in the americas is my proposed fix miss holton did you hear um the other option no he said captured there and then enslaved in the americas back yeah yes actually were captured there and enslaved in the america yes we go back

[07:56:08] to bsu1 team did you get that okay so i'll go ahead no i'm sorry so this 140 um just about potentially having uh one bullet standard that at least reflects um indigenous people north america before we get into what happened with exploration and everything else again lifting up comments that

[07:56:46] i read i thought that was that felt appropriate of course i don't have language for it but i did take note of that call out and maybe there's some content from the u.s one the reference the reference tied back to the us one from the august draft as the language to contemplate so brought it forward i agree with that but dr brown do we have that somewhere else because i remember you and i had a conversation about this a while ago including this i thought so i thought it lived somewhere

[07:57:21] else that at this late hour i can't remember it should be in us i think we already well because we are ready to talk about it and you as well just like remind you know yeah just maybe a that could

[07:57:43] just textualize that before something what are we waiting for we're waiting for is there any other

[07:59:00] spots recovering indigenous you know the point that tammy wants to include here or potentially wants to at least raise up here before exploration yes we covered elsewhere sufficiently and is there a reason not to duplicate that coverage if we do. That's where we are. Sorry, I thought staff was looking for that. Oh, no, it's covered elsewhere in Virginia U.S. It's just a question of the order. Is that right, Tammy?

[07:59:31] No, it's a question of just the whole notion of exploration. Where is it? I've got to put my glasses back. Early explorations come first, and you're saying shouldn't indigenous peoples come first. But is it covered, or early indigenous peoples are covered it would not be covered in this course yeah they are in virginia us too right there under us too right here uh i see okay but it's but it's are they in the rise in the wrong

[08:00:06] place it's okay oh so should the header be above it i i don't know um yeah is it the early america that is yes it's early early another recommendation for indigenous peoples no just i i think it's the early america some kind of representation that would be more inclusive is i think what we're

[08:00:40] asking for is that right i thought what the concern is is that we talk about explorers before we talk about who was here before the explorers so i think it's more of an order thing but maybe i'm wrong no you're not that's why i was kind of called out in the document that i reviewed and i um somehow if you could move vus.2a up above bsu1 maybe there's a way to switch those

[08:01:16] two and then make the heading include ginger indigenous people explorers and founding of any like that era is that possible yes but then the rest of the us2 after a goes on to do all kinds of other things the standard itself is a is mainly about the colonies so a is specific to indigenous peoples so you can you pull a out and add it into us1 somehow and change the heading

[08:01:55] encompass it added to vus1 or us2a up to us really 1a make it 1a and and change the heading to encompass it as well as the explorers does that get at it yes this is an observation that heading there's no heading before us run and we don't have another heading again until we're at the

[08:02:32] western expansion of the country. So if we kind of... There's some inconsistency. A lot of stuff happens in there. Yeah. So I just, I don't even know if it's helpful or necessary. We can fix everything.

[08:02:50] Yeah. We're trying to fix almost everything. This is a massive course. Yes. Yes. It's a massive course. Okay, have we reached resolution to that i'm going to try to move 2a to 1a christine we have a suggestion to move 2a up to us 1a change the standard to read the students will apply history and social

[08:03:28] science skills to describe early north america changing the standard changing the standard so that that sub bullet that substandard fits better yep thank you anybody else on grade 11. uh oh in um us four we moved two sections relating to indigenous communities that were historically in

[08:04:05] the wrong place we moved e and f down later but should we have also moved what was previously g the analyzing the united states subsequent actions leading up to mcgurt v oklahoma i think that no longer the item that ends with mavert v oklahoma no longer no longer belongs in v us4 but rather should go down to 7b i believe is where it's gone to if it i think it goes down

[08:04:38] to 7b or g what was previously 4g 7b yes or somewhere in Well, actually, it might become seven, you know, before it was, you had the one that ended Trail of Tears, the one that ended Sequoia, and then you had the one that ended McCurtney, Oklahoma.

[08:05:10] I think they belong in that order. But chronologically, where you think it belongs within the U.S. 7, but not. There's a lot of conclusion there. Can you state that back just so we get it correctly?

[08:05:39] We moved it from BUS4G to new BUS7, it will be the new D.

[08:05:57] Works for me. Are we still on that provision?

[08:06:19] I think we have that provision. we have that provision done i just had one on uh us.6 uh d caught this last night says compare the powers granted by the constitution to citizens i just think it's a little backwards it's compared the powers um granted by the people through the constitution to congress and i just think

[08:06:49] granted by citizen or if you want to have there are powers that the people grant to themselves through the constitution could be granted by the people and just leave the rest of it the citizens but i just think it's an important makes it sound like the constitution is well how about just would this be a simple fix granted in the constitution compare the powers granted in the constitution to citizens congress or does that not i just think it's important to the constitution is even

[08:07:25] defined by the people so granted by the people in the constitution granted by the people through

[08:07:40] the constitution to congress the president the supreme court um we hear the powers granted by the people through the constitution congress the president the supreme court yeah we need to be

[08:08:18] We're leaving citizens, we're leaving citizens in because we do grand powers to ourselves.

[08:08:39] okay where are we now i have one on i'm not sure if it's us4 or it's us7 there's an edit that's been moved explaining the role of broken treaties and the factors that led to the defeat of the indigenous peoples including but not limited to the resistance of indian nations for encroachment simulation 12 tiers yeah that standard yes okay we got some feedback on defeat and i do think it probably just needs a modifier and i would suggest we put the word militarily in there or the

[08:09:18] military defeat um it was good it was good feedback and also is it the indigenous peoples or of indigenous peoples because they were not a monolith and i think the way the way we have it worded implies like something that's a historical i also want to flag for the team there's some typos all the way through on how we capitalize that we need to take a tight edit because it's not consistent through the document insert the military defeat insert the word military yeah or

[08:09:58] yeah military defeat militarily i would say i think the cleanest thing is to say that led to the military defeat of indigenous peoples so drop the the and insert the word okay anything else on this are we ready we need to talk about the us3 it seemed like there was lots of comments and

[08:10:31] discussion and we've sort of just so we wanted to bring it up so if you want to well i will say i mean i think we've done much stuff it does seem like there's a like it seems like there's two problems that we wrestle with here and i know this is a very sensitive issue but one is america's role in the slave trade and slavery globally and in this hemisphere we had a role in it and there was also slavery in the caribbean base and slavery in south america the unique feature of north american slavery was sort of this rise of white supremacy to justify it and i feel like we don't

[08:11:10] like that that is sort of something that was this race-based idea of slavery did make north american slavery different than than slavery historically and and and elsewhere and i feel like we just i don't know i like we i think where it's implied in these but i just don't know that we've quite like we'd quite like tease it out but i may be the only one i can certainly i can certainly live with this i just want to i just wanted to flag that race-based and inherited but i think some of that is captured in the term chattel slavery that dr ayers has suggested and that is in here

[08:11:45] now is that the version i have has that struck out i don't think so okay yeah this may be a aversion control issue. Right now it says describing the middle passage, transatlantic slave trade, chattel slavery, indentured servitude, and forced labor. I mean, it's not a lot. You're right. It could be more explicit. No, but I think, I actually, I think it's part of the problem. It could, there's a lot of stuff that's got to come in the curricular frameworks. Okay. If we're

[08:12:19] comfortable, and then we struck out the shift to race-based enslavement. I do think, I was curious why we struck that out where oh sorry oh yeah um uh us three again but uh d i think i think there was a staff edit well indentured servitude and race-based enslavement uh went alongside each other for some period i don't know if that was why the staff edited it we did not make it's not a

[08:12:50] I think it's fine the way it is because if you teach that right you're going to teach the ship.

[08:13:06] I just want to flag it. Okay. Anybody else for grade 11? There was a comment for consideration around adding the Philippine-American War under DS11. I would have to defer to the experts here on the impact of this. It's not in the document. Yeah, it's not. Sorry. I knew you guys were looking for it, so I was thinking

[08:13:40] it's not in here. I worry about the extensiveness of this course, right? Not in any sort of effort to not be inclusive of everyone's desires, but I think that just a lot already for us to be, I do have an edit before we move on too. I have a question on that. Dr. Brown, how is that coming? I mean, I remember when I was in school, which was during the contemporary

[08:14:17] era of American history, I'll have you know, we learned that the Spanish-American War that we learned about the philippines as part of as part of that and so what i'm what i'm unclear about with the feedback is is is they want is it is it not being taught and they want to make sure or is it they just want it elevated but in general teachers are teaching that as they teach about the spanish american war and i gather sometimes it's elevated um because it is tied along with the spanish

[08:14:48] So we are teaching this now. It is not an exclusion. It's happening now. It is part of the curriculum. I just checked with the team and they verified it is.

[08:15:13] I have one. We had a couple, at least one, history teacher that came. I don't remember where. In BUS 17, the suggestion was to move those Supreme Court cases to government out of BUS 17A.

[08:15:48] It's just a huge amount of material to contextualize and then also to study at the same time when, obviously, you're studying for cases in government.

[08:16:06] Yeah, I agree with that. Move all that to government. The context of the time period helps a lot with those cases for the same exact reasons that you're talking about.

[08:16:23] But the context, some of them are social movements and cultural in just the context of the time period as to why the Supreme Court would be accepting the case at that time and what's happening contemporarily with the cases.

[08:16:45] if we can alleviate some pressure and not add more i would just suggest grabbing those and moving them to um government just the court cases just the court cases yeah which which standard is okay and there is a place in uh government where we're talking about supreme court where you could put all those are supreme court cases that would be appropriate to a discussion of the spring court

[08:17:16] Well, to Cristania's, I think, point, this really fits in with the discussion of the U.S. at this point in time. Those cases do not necessarily in a discussion of the role and operation of the court. And I think Cristania's point, I won't speak for you anymore today, I promise, is that because they are already going over, if you will, teaching around this time period, the cases just sort of fit in naturally to explain some things.

[08:17:50] Honestly, I would be content to leave them where they are if you want to cut a few of them. Or, you know, I don't care if you cut the Federal Highway Act, for example. I mean, that would be okay. But the rest are, I mean, we're not going to teach the case as a law case.

[08:18:09] We're going to teach it as the holding. And the holdings are pretty crisp and clear. It's one-sentence holdings in each of them. I know that's not exactly true in terms of the opinions, but I mean, the impact of each of those things is a, you know, one sentence thing.

[08:18:27] You know, and I think our kids are, I mean, I guess my point is, I think it fits here in terms of context. Kristania, that close to what you think? Is there a middle ground where some of the explicit cases go into the curriculum framework?

[08:18:45] I don't, yeah, I don't. The concepts they may. Yeah, I think that's fine. I'm afraid that people are going to be asked to match the case. no i agree with that and i'm happy moving them out i don't you know i would leave like i said i think you got to leave brown right you can move the federal highway act uh i don't know honestly about the american indian movement you know my education is deficient there uh indian self determination education assistance act again my education is deficient equal pay act i mean but [08:19:17] But the sort of seminal Supreme Court cases, Brown, you know, Miranda, you know, Roe and then Dobbs are things that get talked about still pretty much every day in American society. I think it's helpful to have them here. I mean, again, framework versus here. I mean, I would prefer the major cases staying here.

[08:19:39] But if you want to move all that stuff to the framework, I guess, you know, as Tammy would say, I'm not going to die in the vine. I won't die in this ditch. chairman i have a recommendation for maybe what we should put in we've already added so much i saw like nodding and i just i would not want to play poker with these people they're very hard to read um what what what fits with the way we do business looking at the standard itself everything that's

[08:20:17] listed it's not hard to have that in the framework you have brown out as kind of like that um flagship and then everything else to the framework but having it been context given a larger standard in what we're looking at as a humidity still so let's do that all of that all right okay then christonia putting the period after acts of congress and then moving the actual acts into

[08:20:56] everything else into the framework i like them being there i mean i think these are like major contours of American life. We're not, yeah, I mean, we're not like, we're not getting into, I mean, I don't know. I think these are, you know, not going way back to Griswold and stuff like that. We're just saying like, you know, Roe and Dobbs are like major features of the world we're sending kids into. Obergefell, I mean, these are like just major sort of contours of how we organize ourselves. I guess the question is, Andy, do you want the kids to have to know the case name

[08:21:28] Or do you want the kids to have to know the impact of Roe, you know, and then the reversal of Roe by Dobbs without necessarily having to be able to cite the court case? Yeah, that's fair. And then I think we need to write a little bit about each holding, which we don't have.

[08:21:45] Which is why I'm content, I think, with the framework, because I'm not sure I care if they can actually cite, you know, well, Griswold, no, but, you know, the case name or Gideon, you know. But I do care that they understand that major shifts occurred because of Supreme Court decisions and what those shifts were.

[08:22:07] You know, Brown first, you know, separate but equal, you know, then Obergefell. I mean, the whole to me, they're OK in the framework because I don't care if they know the names. care if they know the concept anybody else i'm worried without the concept without the names we may lose some of the concepts but i think i may be a minority of one so no no i mean i could argue it the other way too honestly of course because you're a practicing barrister but i'm practicing anymore recovering i'm not prepared to die on the vine on this one either however i just wanted to

[08:22:44] be responsive to what a teacher brought to us who was teaching us history and when you're tied into the social studies universe what do your people say um the idea of moving into framework just again this is not representative of our group of educators was appreciated not considering all

[08:23:13] the things that have been added you know that that that was there i don't want to be mr nick but i do think from where we are as a country the relevance to this generation of students the next seven years all of the other stuff where there's a lot of detail with human events and history to

[08:23:47] me i do believe that these are important i think they're important i'm i'm fine with leaving them yeah just making the counter case for a minute i can practice again in case i ever decide to stop just for the team there's a typo in or edit i'm sure it might be translated exactly from the comment but just to catch that in the middle of page 58 bus 14e there's an extra letter i just

[08:24:24] want you guys to see that before okay great you're on page 58 can i just get clarity is the ink box bp 153 being inserted under a or not unless you raise it you raise it and people actually think it's more clear than what is currently in a i don't know who's comment where are we page 58

[08:24:49] there's only vp153 it's replacement language for vus14a i don't want there to be spread instead of it's breach but yes i support that so the the suggestion is to take the language from the suggest requested edit yeah fix the type i'm moving in i'm okay with that everybody else

[08:25:27] yes yes comment vp153 it needs to be spread yep early morning type in you're always up at five i am uh in the next uh section the uh in in other uh elsewhere in the standards we've used the incarceration rather than internment of japanese americans and i think that is the modern terminology can you say where we looked for that can you say exactly where the us

[08:26:05] 14b currently says internment and it should say incarceration i actually noticed it was used in one or two other places it's inconsistent can you guys do a document search and just look and swap it out but i think that's i think this is one that it needs to change to make it consistent okay done with 11. president gecker while the team searches for the incarceration language

[08:26:35] can i just flag for search for internment thank you thank you it should be incarceration yes there was one additional uh flag by the team for accuracy on vus 0.9 g i'm sorry i'm working on a draft with a different page. Um, so my, my pages are not going to be accurate, but it's

[08:27:09] the US point. 56. The language at the end of that substandard says provided funds to it doesn't. I'm sorry. Yes. Say that now. So there's a flag there where it says after the during reconstruction, we need to add that says provided funds to expand a system of public schools, instead of the creating a system of public schools, just for historical accuracy.

[08:27:49] Any concerns? Yeah, no, I've got that over there. So what do we say is accurate versus non-accurate, factually? Anding versus creating, which is correct. Okay.

[08:28:07] So this is the nod to the Cardinal News editorial. Remember? Yeah. All running together. Secretary Gadaris. One other suggestion I was going to bring to Bohr in, if I may, if we're ready. VUS-12D. No, that's not the right one. I'm sorry. VUS-15D.

[08:28:45] A proposed change and currently says analyzing the changing role of the U.S. in Asia, including Korea, Vietnam, and China. And I would propose adding and the experience of refugees from those nations. I'm sorry, Ann, could you say again where you are? Yeah. The U.S. 15D. Page 59.

[08:29:12] D, okay. This is on page 59. Currently reads analyzing the changing role of the U.S. in Asia, including korea vietnam and china and the proposed addition would be comma and the experience of refugees from those nations which are obviously very prominent did you guys get that i know you're trying to keep power in your computer yeah any experience of refugees from those nations thanks

[08:29:51] sounds like a field trip to eden center for a lot of students in virginia i know what you're talking about sorry i know what you're talking about that it hesitant to ask the whole thing question nothing anything as long as the 12th grade i feel seen you write a sentence i know

[08:30:28] the horses can smell the barn christonya do you want to flag the dates the dates for Is that for government 1B, but the question on the table now is anything else in Virginia, U. S. history? Those.

[08:30:45] Sorry, sorry. I didn't hear that answer that we're putting the dates back in.

[08:30:52] Okay, buddy on grade 12, other than the dates, uh, government 13, a anybody else worried that there's a grammar problem there. Maybe, maybe even just note. I think there's a grammar problem there. If staff can fix it.

[08:31:28] 13A? It's at the top of page 62. I have it on 64. I have it on 64. But 13A, defining capitalism, communism, Marxism, socialism, fascism, authoritarianism, colon, clarify which are political. Maybe that's okay. Okay, never mind. Senioritis, move on. Okay. Clarify or identify?

[08:32:05] i just thought identify which are political systems identify yeah okay yeah did you get that anybody else on grade 12. speaking for one board member that was extremely thoughtful thank you all that was a lot of work and i think a lot of people were expecting something different and that

[08:32:44] It was a really fantastic, interesting experience. And I think we've all listened to the public and learned from the public, and I think the staff have done an amazing job here. Do me a favor. Let's do the post-mortems after we finish the... That was a pre-mortem, Mr. President.

[08:33:01] Just saying. There is the front matter. There is the front matter matter, exactly. Thank you, guys. May we take a quick break before we... We need up to... Yeah, I guess.

[08:33:12] all right we'll do uh you know 6 10. you have to do those of us in the contemporary we actually

[08:41:31] think there may be people watching for a different issue uh clear that we're running pretty late uh it is i guess my prerogative and decision to we're moving the uh you know special education workshop with dr hollins to the june meeting and we're moving the uh presentation on virginia's Unified Measurement and Improvement System to before the item tomorrow. And so we'll get that presentation or at least a portion of that presentation tomorrow before the item comes up on the agenda. But the SPED workshop on here is going to be moved to June. All right. I guess the

[08:42:11] threshold question is, do we need guiding principles or not? Yes, we do. Okay. Now let's go through comments. Dr. Sieber and I heard our conversation. I'll just say like, I'd like to see them on all I feel like we treat standards and content like medicine when in fact like I mean the ones we just went through like that was such an interesting discussion these are like great stories and exciting achievements and horrible tales and stories of progress and where we've fallen short and I feel like every one of them we're not going to do this obviously today but

[08:42:49] like our science standards could you know amazing story of exploration discovery and progress our English standards and the beauty of the written word so I just feel like yes we need them and

And I hope this is not the only set of standards ultimately has some kind of a preface laying out, laying out a vision. This is this is like the fun part.

[08:43:06] OK, let's have some fun. Let's edit this. Jumping in. Well, actually, you know, is it page four? Oh, well, before page four, I think that we're going to need to add Dr.

[08:43:23] Coons into the superintendent page. I hope that's where it says I thought that was covered under add new superintendent here. And do we want to wait till tomorrow to be sure? Is she willing to stay? So to page four, you know, this insure versus restore, can we live with inspire excellence?

[08:43:53] I like inspire excellence, curiosity, and excitement around teaching and learning history. Can we live with inspire instead of restore? Yeah, Mr. Rotherham, I'm looking at you. Well, I had different, I was suggesting raise our aspirations for history and social studies instruction.

[08:44:12] And I can live with inspire excellence, restore excellence, curiosity, etc. But I think like something about raise our aspirations. I mean, I do think the work we just did, like this, this to me, I mean, I'll sort of preview my vote. These, this is a good set of standards. And when you talk to me around the country, this is a set of standards a lot of states would like to have.

[08:44:31] So I, I don't know, mine was like raise our aspirations for history and social studies instruction. Well, but you kept restore. So I'm hearing you say, could you do raise our aspirations? I can live with inspire excellence. Raise our aspirations for history and social studies instruction and inspire.

[08:44:49] Yeah, I'm just one board member. I can live with your new language if we changed restore to inspire. I'm just having a hard time understanding what the concern is about restore. We have two different issues we're dealing with right now as a Commonwealth.

[08:45:10] One is the precipitous drop in our results and our SOLs and NAEP scores and the learning loss that has been, I think, unprecedented. And we also have a changing dynamic in this Commonwealth, in this country, of the framing of the critical issues that we just spent the last six hours talking about.

[08:45:34] And I do think there is a restoration of a lot of what we're trying to accomplish here with these standards. So I don't know why this is a third rail type of word for people. I feel like in the middle of two, I think, very unique crises right now as a country, as a commonwealth, kind of socially, culturally, but also educationally.

[08:46:02] And so in my mind, the word restore is actually important in defining of what this work is all about. I argue for inspire because ultimately that is what education ought to be about.

[08:46:21] It ought to inspire students to be excellent. And honestly, when I heard in our public comment period, you know, where our 2015 standards were prior to the revision that we did, They were evaluated as being cut above many other standards across the country.

[08:46:40] And so I do agree that ultimately from a performance perspective, there is work to do and there is urgency that ought to be associated with it. But this is not that. This is about inspiring a love for learning and education in a way that honors that the professionals that make a choice to become social studies educators are people who are very much committed to their discipline in ways that we ought to honor and regard and not associate the fact that we're not happy about where children are with language and

[08:47:18] a document that really is, you know, ultimately something they are going to pick up and utilize. So I definitely agree with you, Mr. Hanson. There is a lot of work to be done, but I want to focus more on what we hope the standards will result in how learning is engaged, and I think that's why I prefer a word like inspire over restoration.

[08:47:50] We consider both words, inspire and restore. Does ensure do both of those already? What's that? The strikethrough actually says ensure, but I do see where the blue then puts back restore. it's confusing and then the comment is about inspire um i've so done some studying on the word restore um restore is also means to modernize to some degree i do think it's a it is a the word

[08:48:30] different people are coming at it from a different direction as it relates to what this is i think we can all agree that we have to restore so much from what we've lost over the last few years. We've lost so much time in the classroom that children have missed. I really don't think that the use of the word restoring as it refers to excellence is derogatory, which I think perhaps people are interpreting it as being derogatory. I see it as renovating a view of

[08:49:07] excellence and taking a different look at that opportunity to excel in a new way i understand but i just have a different point of view and i heard what people articulated and i think unfortunately some things have been here i say the word politicized in ways that just you know put us in a context where unfortunately we have to be attended to things that perhaps you know i so

[08:49:42] I'm I it is does feel like a third rail to me and I hear you you know why would a single word feel that important but it feels in this context disrespectful to our counterparts in the McDonnell administration and beyond who spent a lot of time on the 2015 standards and this is all about the standards somebody made some pretty darn good standards in 2015 they got a b plus they were one of the top seven or eight in the country, if I remember correctly. And then now we're going

[08:50:15] to make them even better. But I don't see a need in the first sentence to cast disrespect on the people who did the last version of it. And Restore does that to me in the context, especially in the context of the larger context of conversations that have been had over both before we began this history process, but especially in the context of what we've been through since last August.

[08:50:41] That word restore means we're denigrating what the people before us did. And it's just not necessary. You can raise aspirations. You can say we want to go even higher. So that's why I would agree to Andy's raise our aspirations language. But restore says the people before us did wrong, and we're going to go back.

[08:51:00] And it's just not necessary to pick a fight in your first sentence. I frankly think the politics is all on the eye of the beholder. And I do think I hadn't, you know, I just actually looked up in the dictionary here of, you know, renovate, modernize, build up, revive, strengthen.

[08:51:23] I just don't have trouble with the word. And I think everything that we just talked about, it's important for us. So I'm happy to include both words if that would be helpful.

[08:51:39] And I think Andy's recommendations on the aspirations as well. I think we need all three. I mean, I think the clause and incorporating inspire, I mean, it just feels like such a positive and inviting word, you know, inspiring excellence.

[08:52:02] And raising aspirations. what why not channel something that again be positive it seems to me if we can do this without offending a large group of people which you will offend with the restore language because although you may you know the third definition may be pair or renovate the first one is you know bring back to a previous place um which suggests that where we are in terms of our history standards is somehow you know not excellent and there has been really no suggestion that the 2015 standards were not excellent i haven't heard that from anybody so i don't that i don't think that's been part of

[08:52:42] anybody's vocabulary or anybody's positioning part of the fordham institutes right i mean fordham rated us b plus what five or six i'm saying nobody's suggested that the 2015 standards yeah when you say restore excellence that suggests that where we are is not excellent you're telling the teachers of the commonwealth you're telling the people who worked in the education department of the commonwealth you're telling everybody that we are bringing back excellence because the clear implication of that is we are not excellent today but it seems to me

[08:53:16] and you know i appreciate your points bill always about the crises we face in terms of learning loss etc but this sentence is specifically is not about excellence in the education system it is specifically about teaching history and learning history it is not overall about our reading and writing clearly we have issues there that we need to address and you know although you can strain and say well we're really just renovating that's the meaning there are a large group of people who are not going to read it that way what they're going to read it as is you don't think it's

[08:53:52] excellent today i've been teaching this in the commonwealth for the last you know seven years well, I guess eight years, how long have we been doing this now? A while, under standards that are not excellent. And there is just no reason to give offense and to create that implication when it does not impact the substance of what we are looking to do here, which is to provide an excellent set of standards going forward. You know, what I don't understand, honestly, is why it's so important to

[08:54:25] use the restore word when there are so many other words that will carry this, like the inspire word that we've just been talking about. I've seen too many times, and I guess what this feels like to me is that every time somebody does something new, and these are new standards, what they really want to say is, these are a lot better than the old ones. And really what we're doing is building here. We are not looking to create the implication that the last ones were bad. They were perfectly

[08:55:00] appropriate for the commonwealth at the time and you know i really wish you guys would reconsider making this the uh die in the ditch issue for you i'm not dying in a ditch so that means it's okay to take it out and put it i think it's okay to go with andy's recommended language and inspire instead of restore can you live with inspire instead of restore with your extra words i want to hear from everybody i mean i i can live i can live with a bunch of things if

[08:55:36] we get the concept but we haven't heard from we haven't heard from everybody here i've talked i've talked a bunch i wrote it so and i'm clearly behind inspire i did right and when i say i wrote i mean i wrote that edit that we're now talking about i didn't write this entire thing be clear may i make a comment i'm just not sure that i think raise our aspirations for history and social studies instruction and restore excellence curiosity i'm not sure that sitting here talking about it for

[08:56:12] another 15 minutes is going to make any difference so my my suggestion is to somewhat outside of the fact that we are no not in a business meeting right now is just to move move on to the next thing what does that mean though i mean i want to know move on to the next thing means leave it as it is or go for the language that uh andy has added along with well i'm i'm saying no to restore but the first part of his sentence um feels good and adding excellence inspire excellence i mean

[08:56:51] what so you're saying just to wait and vote on it later yep i guess i'm a new guy so and i don't have a lot of the background this is word the meaning of the word and from 2015 i'm a 2023 guy Um, and it seems to be a sticking point for some, in my opinion, the restore using that word is not a sticking point, um, is saying improving.

[08:57:24] It doesn't seems like it's to me that I don't have the history. I don't have the background of, I think it's going to make some, a group of people feel bad. I don't know about that, Dan. Um, but as far as the word, I don't object to the word.

[08:57:40] Um, I will support the word being used. and as grace said i guess we could continue on and make this a separate item as far as do we use the word restore not or do we poll the group and if there's a consensus whatever the word will be used just move forward that is the plan to poll the group i mean i don't plan to just move on we're going to poll the group see where we are and we're going to you know just like we did with standards we're going to see if you know if we don't reach consensus we'll reach a majority yes and move on from there. I'm back to, again, I probably read this too quickly. The first edit was to change

[08:58:19] restore to ensure, and then the blue puts it back in. So does ensure not ameliorate the feelings here or accomplish something? I'm struggling. I think that might be a typo. I think ensure might have, should have come out. I think that's actually a typo. Aim to raise our expectations for history and social studies instruction to okay to ensure excellence i get the i get the inspire is aspirational i get to restore is is like renewal um i i i agree that this is important

[08:58:59] discussion but i just also know as a teacher um i'm going to my standards yeah okay so what does that mean in terms of i i think to ensure is is a a peacemaking word but in other words move the insure put after and to insure excellence and I would be okay with that. There was a legislative battle in a different context last year, but it was about insure versus, it was about restore

[08:59:32] language and restore went out and insure was the compromise between the two bodies with different political leadership. I did not know that. Insure was the compromise reached on the language, the language started out restore and it came out ensure it was a different context it was hb 938 and i and i'm and i don't need to over speak i don't know the legislative history in that good that detail but i do know the language started out restore and it came out ensure and to me that seemed like a compromise again here that would be added after the end but i do i do think

[09:00:12] that that andy's language is includes the part about we want to go higher and i could see why some folks might feel like Ensure doesn't get the go higher part. So Andy's raise our aspirations goes higher and Ensure excellence. But I don't, but I could live with Ensure or Inspire. I personally, I can't live with Restore. I don't know whether that means I would vote against it or not. I'd

[09:00:44] have to think about that at the end of the... Alan? I'd like to hear, I'm still trying to figure out some of the importance that's being described here. And so I'd like to know feeling about ensure but i didn't realize like i saw it here in red i didn't realize that was also political language from the last session well no and i'm saying it wasn't political language it was the compromise it was the bill that both sides all sides agreed to i don't have a problem with ensure

[09:01:19] um i like inspire but i can i can um yield to ensure i do not like restore and i feel uh the concern about the word comes from the things that we have heard expressed about the word.

[09:01:37] It's not me making up things. And I think to the point our president noted, if we can err on the side of inviting language, that doesn't create a sense of frustration about this whole process. And I don't want to go back over the whole process and the fact that this started in september and it's almost april and we're trying to get it done i do think there are some areas

[09:02:11] where we simply should invite ourselves to embrace language that neutralizes that tenor that has surrounded this whole process so if i have to leave aspiration or inspiration to the side i i'm willing to do that but restore for me right now plays into that and i'd like to kind of you know retract from it so it's not kind of what's in my head or what my feelings are it's trying to

[09:02:41] channel and appreciate what we've heard the field say to us as a result of what is here all right try this again grace okay what do you want me to tell you uh are you willing to substitute insure for uh restore no and yes alan decided reset my piece yes i would also bill no i'm just i actually

[09:03:15] think with andy's words of raising our aspirations the word restore really does go to the definitions that we were talking about so um i think it changes it and uses i think those descriptors versus some of the others that you referenced earlier.

[09:03:34] No. Andy? No. No, he won't change. Yeah, I'm good with restore. Okay. Let's move on. You guys know where that went, right? Thank you. Anything else in this document? Should we just go graph by graph?

[09:03:56] Would that be most efficient? That would be fine. What did you say? Graph by graph. Sorry, paragraph by paragraph. Sorry. i'm learning andy shorthand speak um uh you'll be the one if that is the case um uh uh so on the third one um i i would suggest a couple of things uh i think it's third or fourth sentence the standards will recognize the world impact of america's i would insert the word ongoing quest for a more perfect union yeah there's no ongoing so first paragraph's introduction second paragraph

[09:04:32] is every graduate third paragraph is the united states whose founding history so about halfway through that after the quote from the declaration the next sentence is the standards will recognize the world impact i would insert the word ongoing in front of quest okay and then i'd add to it after a more perfect union i would have it read this way i may have to read a couple times make it clear and the optimism ideals and imagery captured by ronald reagan's shining city on a hill speech lincoln's second inaugural address and frederick douglas's complicated love for america

[09:05:06] i feel like that's a place we can that's a that's a place where we can add a little bit to really showcase the breadth of our aspirations here any comments on that from anybody one more time and so it would read the sentence what would be easier bill i can read the changes or read the whole thing what would be the changes would be so it'll say ongoing quest and then in the optimism ideals and imagery captured by roland reagan's shining city upon a hill speech lincoln's second

[09:05:40] inaugural address and frederick douglas's complicated love for america i can live with it in the spirit of compromise i would have liked to just put a period after more perfect union in the spirit of compromise i can live with that okay next paragraph let me make sure the team did you catch that okay great and i will say this on the record i believe frederick douglas is going to have a moment soon and we will have proven to be ahead of the curve

[09:06:12] by highlighting that okay next graph you did that i heard you anybody looking over there but no Does that mean the language stays as it's edited?

[09:06:32] It is going to be added to with Lincoln's second and all. Oh, no, I'm not talking about it. Next graph. I'm sorry, next graph. Who exists with? Are you talking about the blue above? I'm talking about that people are capable of.

[09:06:48] Yes. Yes, that stays. That stays unless somebody pulls it out. Just to be clear that evil exists. Is currently not there. We must misunderstand our process here.

[09:07:07] Well, it's got a black line through it, right? Yes, it's going more to the heart of the fact that people are capable. Individuals are capable. The black line is currently out. The underline is currently out. The black line is suggested to take it out.

[09:07:23] That was the original text. Yeah. Again, I would prefer the original text. So that evil exists. What's the concern? What's the concern with that? Concern with what?

[09:07:39] With including evil, that evil exists. Because people are responsible for the atrocities that happen to people. It's a very specific way, and you can call it evil, but the reality is people are doing these things to people.

[09:07:56] Oh, I see. Yeah, so would a compromise just be that evil exists and people are? Would that be the compromise? Compromise. Well, just the way, because I mean, the idea of evil existing, we may disagree on that, and that would just be a disagreement, but if there's no disagreement on that, I have no problem with the people language, but the evil part seems important.

[09:08:24] I agree. document what you're saying but i also believe that there is evil in institutions in the world and that's what i think this is trying to get at and we've faced the evil empire we faced um so i again are made up of people right but they're and they become evil yes i'm i'm fine with the compromise but i definitely want people included because ultimately people i'm fine with including

[09:09:02] people, yeah. You're saying leave it as evil exists and people are capable of destroy. That's what I was suggesting. Yeah, I'm just repeating it, Andy. I'm good with that. All right, everybody okay with that? Let's move on. In the next paragraph, I've suggested that we change the stain of slavery to the horror of slavery. I can live with that. I just want to offer just a push for the board, and I know where that comes from. It seems to me, and this just may be a language

[09:09:37] stain to me seems like something more in the present and ongoing and horror seems like there's lots of horrors of the past and that to me three is not semantics like I can live with either one but to me stain was actually the stronger language too many people that stain felt like it was trivializing it and I hear you there might be disagreements on that but having heard that from a number of people that's my look for another word I'm open to suggestions as to another word that doesn't um some people carry that connotation i agree i've heard that and you know you just

[09:10:13] block stains out and um the reality is what happened was horrific on multiple levels and that should be not trivialized with something that you can just and and i hear you that that may not be what you meant by the you would mean by the word stain or what somebody whoever initially drafted this myth by the word stain but there are i have heard from a number of folks from for whom that's the connotation i would agree with andy i think the word staying to me was stronger

[09:10:51] because i think you can wash it away but it also can stay with you and i think that's what we have but i also if this helps us get to where we need to be i would be happy to go with horror or whatever word you think is more appropriate and so you could use evil there as well i was thinking that too. We just used evil before. I propose horror. Can we live with horror? I will say, you know, believe it or not, I would certainly yield to you on this, Tammy, every day. But stain of slavery is what Booker used in his speech to Congress on racism. I mean, it is.

[09:11:29] That's where it came from. Yeah. And so, I mean, if you tell me, and I believe you have just said that you don't, you think it trivializes it. I have heard that express from groups And that's fine. I mean, I'm certainly yielding to that. But I don't think the drafters here meant anything other than to take the phrase currently in use by, like I said, you know, in Congress on this topic. So we're going to horror.

[09:12:03] is that i would recommend it if that's what let's do her and move on yeah i don't think there's any pride of authorship here because we didn't this isn't so um in the next uh uh in the next uh very next sentence could we add so inhumanity and the deprivations of totalitarian and communist regimes sorry so like the very next actually the same sentence it's a long sentence isn't that already there so what are you adding oh that is the totalitarian okay i'm sorry sorry i'm working

[09:12:38] up two documents there was a there was a problem in front of communists it would read totalitarian

[09:12:45] and communist regimes at the end of that sentence okay okay next under principles i'm not sure that

[09:13:35] grammatically taking our in the second bullet taking our or striking that before constitutional republic works yeah it needs an a or an or yes or an r excuse me so you want to put our back in yes please yeah for me so on the principle that deals with socialism or communist political systems i'm

[09:14:10] not quite sure what the final product is now i guess there's some argument and there's a comment that i'm not sure what whether it's suggesting we just take that out altogether but if it remains in i have argued elsewhere and continue to argue we should take the socialism or part out yeah can we back that's important can we back up um express but not realized by the founders can we put express

[09:14:33] but not fully realized yes yeah works for me yeah sounds good so now going on can we go on to mind the just delete in centralized government planning in the form of communist political system is incompatible with democracy and individual freedoms is what i would propose taking out socialism or again as i said before it could be a great question for a high school

[09:15:10] debate class whether socialism can be compatible with democracy, but not something we'd want to enumerate here as a principle, given that there are democratic socialist countries or countries that claim to be democratic socialist countries. I think I added this note again, going back to some of the comments that I read and other feedback that the board received about just questioning whether these were statements, whether these were principles or statements of ideology i raised the question because it was raised in the feedback that we received as a

[09:15:48] board and so i just raise it here for that purpose i very much view it as a principle but um and i also understand some of the democratic socialist countries but um i also think that i'm very hard pressed to not want to criticize socialism if in almost every one of its forms in terms of taking away our freedoms taking away our liberty and taking away our ability to have a society that

[09:16:27] people can grow and find great success and so i would recommend that we leave it in there and i do view this as a principle of very much of everything that our standards of history should be hinged on so no i thought bullets one and two did an excellent job of articulating what you're speaking about um anson so i certainly embrace that i was you know i think as

[09:17:02] we're we're being challenged as a board to be deliberative in our treatment of language that again invites questions that if we don't have to contend with them and it so i i very much agree with what you said and i think the bullets one and two go to the heart of the importance of the freedoms and liberties liberties we have um so the i mean the standards that we've just finished looking at do a great job addressing all of this i think now i mean they're you know what do you

[09:17:40] mean by the word socialism is a big discussion and a big question. And there's at least one and maybe two current sitting United States senators who call themselves socialists. And to say that they are a definition in our announced introductory principles incompatible with democracy and individual freedom, even though they've been elected by a majority of their state's voters, you know, I just don't, it depends on what you mean by the word. There's not enough room for nuance here in a in a principle statement and i just don't see why it's there yeah can we can i offer maybe a compromise on this was i did some language because i i do agree there's like first of all i'm not sure the world is waiting with bated breath for the virginia board of education

[09:18:21] socialism versus social democracy um maybe um but it seems like the idea we're trying to get at is more about like you know state power and control over individual liberty and so forth and we're getting we're getting hung up because like we we say norway socialist but if you say that to them they say no we're a social democracy um and and so i just don't know that we can parse that so what if we just said something like centralized government planning in the form of communist political systems as well as fascism totalitarians and other forms of government the preference state power over individual state power or control over individual liberty are incompatible sorry i'm I'm hungry.

[09:19:03] Centralized government planning in the form of communist political systems, that's existing language, and then says, as well as fascism, totalitarianism, and other forms of government that preference state power or control over individual liberty are incompatible with democracy. So essentially, instead of trying to use the word to define the word, we actually, we describe, because in my conversations with different board members, there's not a lot of disagreement about the underlying idea.

[09:19:28] just getting we're getting hung up while we're getting how about we just that last phrase is i'm a little bit unclear what it means but how about what such as as well as fascism or totalitarianism does that yeah preference they are incompatible with the american way of life or the america you know we don't have to say democracy something something along those lines how about i'm editing suggesting an edit to your editor specifically referencing fascism and totalitarianism which is what we've done elsewhere to resolve this debate. But I'd leave it vague. Other forms of government that preference state power control

[09:20:05] over individual liberty is sort of a catch-all. I don't know what the heck that means. Therefore, I'm not really comfortable putting it as a defining principle. There. Any other thoughts on this, guys? I'm actually comfortable with what Andy suggested, and I do think that the last piece, there are a lot of mixed-use governments around the world that are hybrids or combinations of these so it doesn't um i don't think it's sending any weird

[09:20:39] signals or anything and i think if we're accommodating uh the socialism issue to describe it in these other ways then i think that's i'd be fine with them so where are we on this perfect say that you say it one more time yeah and maybe we there may be room i suspect this can language be improved other forms of government that preference state power or control over individual liberty and yeah obviously in in or over maybe over the consent of the governed would be another way to put it it might be a better it might be i mean that's the idea we're trying to get at here

[09:21:18] i think but we put a comma just to make the grammar work then as well as powerful wow that's still quite a sentence so we could just say consent to the governed i think individual liberty is probably you like that okay better than consent to the governed well i was going to say no so it would have been state power control over individual liberty and consent of the government okay sorry that's fine quite a second kim do you have that okay i'm not sure we have it yet i'll reread it

[09:21:57] let's yeah i'm not sure we have it for what it's worth i don't like it it's a humongous sentence with i mean i just don't even like it as a grammatically you haven't even heard it yet give it three minutes while you listen to it pretty consistent with what we've embedded in a couple of our standards so i promise in two minutes after kim reads it back so i left socialism and communism in because i didn't think we had gotten to a point on that yet so i'm going to read it with it in there and we can we can deal with it but the whole sentence would read centralized

[09:22:36] government planning in the form of socialism or communist political systems as well as fascism totalitarianism and other forms of government that preference state power or control over individual liberty and consent of the governed are incompatible with oh you want that left in there I think that's the whole point yeah right that's the verb there's not otherwise a verb in the sense well other forms of that preference state power or control over individual liberty of the governed are incompatible the point is the preference over yeah are incompatible and we can I think we can say incompatible with the American way of life or democracy.

[09:23:14] What are you saying? You're leaving it a democracy and individual freedoms or are you changing it? I want to hear from others. I mean, can you read it one more time? Centralized government planning in the form of socialism or communist political systems, as well as fascism, totalitarianism, and other forms of government that preference state power or control over individual liberty and consent of the governed are incompatible with democracy and individual freedoms or do you not need that anymore i said i included individual liberty

[09:23:50] but you've got liberty so i've got we don't need freedom now right sounds good i have no objection to content at this point grammatical i think it's a nightmare but if y'all were willing to live with it i can live with it maybe we can clean it up i don't think that critique is off base yeah all All right, next.

[09:24:14] Can we insert, next, well, America is at once exceptional and not perfect? The insertion is but imperfect. So America is at once exceptional but imperfect.

[09:24:33] Yeah, I can go either way. I like at once exceptional and not perfect. I like the balance of that more, but rather than have that statement being a but statement.

[09:24:50] But that's not a vine or a hill or a gully that I'm going to die on. So it would read, and make sure I read, it would read, America is at once exceptional and not perfect.

[09:25:07] At once exceptional and not perfect. It just makes it an and statement, not a but statement. Does at once mean, excuse me, I mean, I don't. At the same time. Can we say is both? Sure. If that's true for that, yeah.

[09:25:23] America is both exceptional and not perfect. Okay, next. I think, sorry, you guys are going to hate me. Can we say through the ages rather than over? Over is a direction, through. 30. Okay, that one made it through. Sorry, not all mine made it. Page six. Top of page six is the line human history is complex. Is that in or out? It's in. That's in. In the next paragraph, there's new

[09:26:01] language more than any previous version in the Commonwealth's history. I think that's for others to say rather than us, but it also seems to me in the spirit of unnecessarily denigrating the work of our predecessors. So if we're going to add that new sentence, I would just start with these standards, lay out the achievements and progress of our story. Sorry, I'm for clarity here. Is the blue underlying within here, or is this what's been? There's new blue language proposed to be

[09:26:37] added, and I am proposing to take out first phrase of that more than any previous version in the Commonwealth's history I would do. Who was suggesting this be added? I have no idea. i suggested that actually and the reason why we've been beaten up non-stop about these standards we just literally spent an afternoon on all the things that people have been telling us weren't even in the standards we spent afternoon parsing trying to get it right because this board cares that much i mean the previous standards have been good the original allen standards were a huge step forward for the commonwealth but these in terms of the breadth of the things that we're including

[09:27:13] and covering um on the good and bad side i think i think are noteworthy effort in history i mean i just feel like well we don't ever in history is like what 25 years of mad yeah i well people came in tammy you were there people came in and and tried to argue that we were teaching these they brought these textbooks from the 1950s and that we were teaching these which is crazy you've heard enough public meetings by now andy that we don't need to respond to everything so it's not responding this is a framing document it's framing this is what we are trying to do and ideally that in the

[09:27:47] future people take it even further and in different ways. In the spirit of the time already spent and also not a gully to die in, on the very first sentence, I mean, the previous version of the history piece, just these standards lay out achievements. I mean, I'll give you this if you give me a restore. I will die on the vine on that. I really will. Andy, I think a piece of what,

[09:28:23] But I mean, just to be fair, I do think we are conflating sort of the overall sense of outcry that people had about how what was a year and a half process got replaced and displaced.

[09:28:39] And so some of what we have heard really comes from that. And I mean, I really do hate to bring that up, but that feels like a very important context. We are trying to overcome some of the challenges that we've endured in this journey of getting here today.

[09:28:58] So I think it's it it doesn't really adequately reflect the sense of passion and and and just, you know, people feeling a bit disregarded in the time that was spent coming up with what was presented.

[09:29:15] So I would appreciate a compromise in that regard since I, you know, didn't succeed at getting the store removed. I'm very much feeling like we should. I would add that I think the standards that we're doing speaks for itself.

[09:29:33] I think it should start at these standards, lay out the achievements and progress of our story. They do. This may be the best version in history and history can determine that. But I think we could just start with these standards. Well, I can live with that. As I said, not a gully to die in.

[09:29:52] Okay. How many more places we're going to figure out we're going to die? But we're keeping the second part? Yeah, we'll keep the second part. I would point out, Andy, that in January of 22, there was not an outcry about the standards product done by the history team. Not at all.

[09:30:12] I mean, the outcry was created by the process and what happened from January 22 forward. I'd respect, but I don't want to get into it. Some of the outcry was simply politics. I mean, I take Dr. Mann's point, but people are coming and saying stuff that wasn't true about the work.

[09:30:30] And that was being ginned up and there was a whole sort of context. And that's just not... I've got five people here who have spent years doing this now through a process that has been hijacked. And, you know, it's just not right to not acknowledge that.

[09:30:46] I totally disagree with the conjecture that this process has been hijacked. There were five new board members appointed in the summer of 2022 who had not seen the body of work that had been going on before. And we can open up this whole Pandora's box.

[09:31:03] Yeah, we're not going to do it tonight. No, we're not. But this is, there is an awful lot that has just been conjectured by both that is, I think this document that we have today is a combined terrific product built on the 18 months that was done before.

[09:31:23] this board was seated and had the opportunity to look at it and it's now been added upon and so why do we keep looking in the rear view mirror and not looking at the fantastic product we have from the previous 18 months and now from the last 10 months that have put together a fantastic product and i don't know why we're off in that ditch because we keep referring to it in these comments like the previous version that's why because we keep looking back at we passed that we struck that. We're gone. Moving on. May I suggest that we change the language in the beginning of the next paragraph that refers to the 2022 standards to the 2023 standards.

[09:32:01] I disagree. Hopefully not to become the 2024 standard. And I would, okay, excuse me. That's all. Oh, well, go ahead. So if we're going to new language, the new language is added.

[09:32:21] teachers should not not intentionally expose students to embarrassment or disparage meant or unreasonably restrict students access to varying points of view i just thought unreasonable was just was a subjective word um because in the minds of of an educator what's unreasonable to one it could be reasonable to another and so i'm wondering if if we need to have unreasonable there because it it does feel rather subjective sure so that language is straight from the nea so that's

[09:32:58] there that's their professional code of conduct i can totally if we think uh unreasonable will create confusion and weaken the point but that's what any which language is from the nea basically everything on um exposing students to embarrassment or disparagement or unreasonably restricting access to varying points of view that holds that stuff i was curious because what we were struggling with was this issue of how do you how do you write this in a way that doesn't you know seem to restrict but also basically this is a little bit of you know we all know when we see it when the teacher is either over the line or is just doing really good teaching with really deep critical

[09:33:37] thinking and it's hard to write that and so i looked around for good examples and the nea had a very good example in their code of conduct for language like this so that's teachers should not intentionally expose students to embarrassment or disparagement or unreasonably restrict student access to varying points of view, that's from the that's yeah yeah that's their it's from their professional code of conduct um but then that would be that would be replacing the language in other words the sentence this bullet would read teachers should engage students in age appropriate ways period teachers should not intentionally expose is that well i'm also okay

[09:34:13] with do not suggest students um uh are responsible i want an economic class added to that though as as well. So there's two separate pieces here, but the final sentence is the one that's directly from the NEA. Yeah, the part from the NEA starts with teachers should not intentionally expose and ends with varying points of view. I mean, I feel like that's a good that's an important statement as a way to thread the needle, but I just thought unreasonable was

[09:34:48] definitely subjective and you know hopefully that um but i worry introduces if i you know as a parent feel like i don't really like even if it was reasonable that something got introduced about a topic that i'm not comfortable with um if i feel it's unreasonable then i have grounds all of a sudden to engage in you know um with respect dr mann if we don't put some modifier if we just say access to varying points of view we will have a bunch of people in here saying we're going to teach both sides of the holocaust or all this other stuff i think we have to put something

[09:35:26] because of the climate we're in if we just say don't restrict teachers to varying points of view um i just i just think that's going to set off in this current climate we have to put something i uh when we're ready i'd like to move on to the first part of that sentence okay move on i mean i'm sorry not the first part of the sentence the prior sentence which i think is currently listed as ending with age-appropriate ways period and i think the sentence that andy

[09:36:02] is proposing to add essentially does accomplishes the same thing that that prior sentence final phrase is trying to accomplish but does it much better i'm not comfortable with the immutable characteristics et cetera language but the pink language is what we originally had in is that correct it was in the original draft it was in the draft it was in the November draft so if what I'm recommending at this point if understanding what Andy's

[09:36:39] telling us about the source on that one teachers should engage students in age appropriate ways period teachers should not intentionally expose students to embarrassment or disparagement or unreasonably restrict student access to varying points so you want to eliminate the pink portion correct which is struck it stricken through on the draft I'm looking at well this version of still there. Paper copy. We've got so many comments on top of comments. The one that they handed out today. I think what we've got is comments on top of comments. So, somebody, maybe me, proposed

[09:37:14] deleting it, and then Andy proposed adding the new sentence. And the question is, is that red sentence in or out? I'm recommending that it be out. That do not suggest students are responsible for historical wrongs based on immutable characteristics such as race or ethnicity.

[09:37:32] And I can make lots, I can give lots of reasons for it if need be. Can you give us one? Yes. That language has been used in statutes in other states that has gotten teachers fired for teaching things they shouldn't have been fired for. It's just too vague.

[09:37:49] It's too hard for anybody to understand what the heck it means. And it's been misused in other states. Andy, your additional language was intended to deal with that?

[09:38:08] It was intended to add to it. actually don't have a strike yeah it was that dad I don't have I don't have a problem with putting that safeguard in there we also I mean we could bulk the language up around I mean essentially our standard is title four and title six since we could just bulk some of the language up around that I think it's important to leave the pink language in if we want to have Andy's additional language to build upon it I'm fine with that what it's worth the pink language is

[09:38:47] die on the hill i'm not dying on anything i just think it's important it is a die on the hill language for me so i don't know if at some point we need to discuss whether or not we're going to be able to vote separately on the principles front matter from the rest of the standards but i i and i don't want to put down absolutes but as of this moment i can't vote i don't think i can vote for this document if that language is in there okay i feel very passionately about some of these examples where that exact language has been used to get people fired that shouldn't have been fired.

[09:39:21] What is that? What's an example of that? Help us. I can do my homework tonight and bring some of them back to you, but that language has been used in other states and it's been misused. Because the plain letter of that is awfully hard to object to. What? The plain letter of it is awfully hard to object to. I mean, and obviously, like, I don't think any of us would support the inverse. What does it mean to say students are responsible for, you know, somebody, and we've [09:39:45] We've talked about this before, and I'm trying not to repeat even things I've said in prior meetings, but what's it mean to say, if you teach something happened to white people in the past were responsible for suppressing the black vote, and some white student, which is true fact, and some white student in your class feels like you're telling them they're responsible for that historic wrong, then because they're white, then that could be understood to be in violation.

[09:40:19] of that clause. But that's why we took out the language on sort of how it makes you think and feel because that's obviously not falsifiable or we don't have that language. There's this is this is what I think this seems much more provably falsifiable or not. Did you you know it says you can be exposed to the facts of the past even when those facts are uncomfortable. So we're not saying we're not saying no one has a right to be not made uncomfortable or whatever but like it's that next step but that's why i'm struggling in the spirit of compromise i'm inviting folks to think about whether you can accomplish what you need to accomplish without that language and you what

[09:40:59] you're saying that basically the first we could do teacher should engage in any appropriate ways period then the thing that you added teacher should not intentionally um no mine was after that so mine was teacher should not she just should engage in age-appropriate ways um uh all that whole sentence immutable characteristics i actually wanted to add economic class to that as well okay and then um and then teachers should not intentionally exposed to it's just to bulk it up at what we're basically the idea of what we're trying to get at here and again including you should not restrict access to varying points of view but again like reasonably to try to get at

[09:41:38] the idea that we're not saying there's two sides to everything so where are we on this all right andy i take it you want your language as is well i'm one board member i like having that in there as well not offering as a substitute but others may have you know dr may has expressed

[09:42:14] she doesn't like an aspect of that well i just said it was subjective and i think if i worried about you know if we kept unreasonable in your clause in that you brought from nea and we struck that do not suggest students are responsible do not suggest that might be the the element that miss holton is focusing in on because what again if i'm a student and i'm experiencing that even if you've not done anything to make me uncomfortable but i feel that it has suggested xyz then you're

[09:42:49] on the hook i mean i do think we have to appreciate the fact that um there is a lot of nervousness about how to go at this content in ways that don't result in people all of a sudden having their job in jeopardy and i think we should be okay understanding that that's a dynamic that we are confronted with with this and try to make sure we do our very best to not um uh invite that kind of um challenge for educators could we could we then say i that i i hear your point i think maybe we're not as far apart as we all as it might seem what about if we just said use the words ascribe

[09:43:29] blame i'm not comfortable with the immutable characteristics responsible language responsible for historical wrongs based on should it be that is it okay then that teachers would suggest that students are responsible for what their ancestors did would that be okay for a teacher to do in the classroom would it be okay for a teacher to suggest to another kid that you're responsible for what your ancestors did no and of course they and and they don't that's the other problematic part of this language is the implication that teachers have been doing this and you may be

[09:44:05] able to find one small case there's a hundred thousand teachers in virginia and somebody did something stupid but on the that's it's it's insulting to teachers to suggest they would do that i i'm sorry i feel passionately about this and it's late in the day and maybe we should you know maybe there's a way to move on and come back to it yeah we're going to reach resolution we do have other language down below that that talks more about what teachers should and shouldn't do but this is one i think the compromise is to add andy's new sentence yeah and and and i guess i'm the pink language i'm very much i don't i'm getting very uncomfortable when we talk about

[09:44:44] things how things make people feel whatever you might read a book and it might make you feel uncomfortable with that that's not falsifiable and teachers like should not be you know how someone how something makes somebody feel if you learn a lesson about say mass resistance and it makes you said, like, that's not on the teacher. So why is this so important? But this other piece of, like, I think we're trying to get to, that's why I could go with the scribe blame, the sort of, when it crosses over into sort of an active, not how somebody receives something, but how the teaching is, I think it's an important, I think it's important to sort of have a high standard

[09:45:19] of professionalism, particularly in a politically charged time. And I think, like, Mr. President maz just a point of process sure if we get to the end of this and i'm not comfortable with the preface matters but i am comfortable with the standards am i going to have an opportunity to vote separately on the preface matters we will vote to include the preface matters in the standards but we're going to pass a single document including the path the preface matters so in other words i can vote against against the preference and then vote for the whole document including the preface is my plan right now doing it because honestly it would be a shame to throw

[09:45:58] out if you will and i know it's not going to throw it out that's not the phrase i should use it would be a shame for the board not to be unanimous on the standards given all that's gone into this so i agree with that principle but there are a couple of these things that i have to sleep again before i can get myself

there if you can put yourself on record with the preface if you will, but it will pass as a full document. And I said it would be a shame to not have us be

[09:46:28] able to have an 8-0 vote, or if Pam's here, a 9-0 vote on the standards. I mean, we've come too far and we're too darn close for me to be comfortable saying, you know, there's a reality to the political process that we're living now, right? And that is, we vote on issues like this, and you know, the majority rules. But you know, I appreciate the depth of your concern. But as you

[09:47:03] know, one of my old mentors used to say, don't let the perfect be the enemy of the good. I feel like the message we send is, you know, if you vote no to the standards, I believe that sends an entirely wrong message that won't be parsed out by the public. I mean, the public will not understand And that your discontent was just with the forward.

[09:47:25] And I think that would be a shame. Oh, I hear you. But I'm not telling you how to vote. I'm just telling you that it is my goal to move this board to passing something that in terms of what we're going to teach our kids is a good document for us moving forward.

[09:47:43] And all this forward stuff, you know, do I like it? No, you know, I don't like it. But am I going to vote for the whole package? yes, I'm going to vote for the whole package because I believe in what we've done. Can I ask for modification on what your approach was going to be?

[09:47:59] Because I do imagine that after we get through the forward, that I'm sure there are going to be pieces that we are aligned on, given the compromises that have been made. But perhaps if there is a way to deal with some of the edits that are...

[09:48:17] I don't want to, no, I don't want to, and I'll think about it, But I don't want to rehash these edits when we know what the votes are. I mean, we have already generated, you know, some I've lost on. I don't want to rehash it tomorrow just to have it out there.

[09:48:32] You know, it doesn't make time sense to me to do that. But I'll think about it overnight. And, you know, certainly the board has some, can express their view that we ought to do it that way also, in which case that's the way we'll do it. But right now the plan is reach consensus or not, if you will, at least where we know where the majority is, revise the document, have a final document as, you know, the staff knows will pass before us tomorrow to pass. That is my goal.

[09:49:06] I appreciate your clarification on the process, and I will mull all that over. Thank you. Can I ask one point of clarification, because the staff is working furiously back there to provide you what you need. You want a clean copy of the standards based on where we are. So they can, I know we're not done with this section, and we can wait on that section.

[09:49:25] Yeah, but I'm going to, they can work on providing you a clean copy for tomorrow. I would prefer, it's great to have a clean copy, folks, in order to, oh yeah, you can show what we changed, but you have seen the discussion, you know where the consensus is on every comment in the document, I'd like it changed in accordance with those comments.

[09:49:48] So do you want a red line or do you want a clean? If we have one, we can have the other. i just want to make sure we prepare exactly what you want i think the clean one should have draft all over it because it's like yeah the team has been working really hard and it's completely unreasonable expected to be so we should still condition people there's going to be typos or and we will pass it with a motion that allows for correction post passage yeah andy is there bullet two that this time and energy has gone into this is there language here that you and Dan could compose? We can talk. I think ascribe blame. I mean, I think Dale's question is a very

[09:50:25] good one, which is like when you invert this, no one's for it. So like what's, it's a little unclear what we're arguing about. If I think if suggest sounds too vague, ascribe blame is more precise. Again, my, again, my feeling, I have no interest in something on how people are made to feel because that's what you can't control. We should have a high standard professionalism on how we teach about difficult topics are you two willing to work on something for the rest of us

[09:50:58] to consider i mean well i think what's what's there is what we have to act on now if andy is saying that this is what he's doing well it's not just me well i i agree i i think what's there is solid i would support what's written and to move forward i am of the same mind i would actually recommend we cut it out after class but if we need to add the blue qualifier we'll support that embarrassment and disparagement or the embarrassment and disparagement language

[09:51:36] would you say the blue qualified? Right. Okay, embarrassment is a feeling. Fair point. If we're going further down, I think everybody knows what we're trying to do on, we want to make sure the boards are providing high quality materials. What we have now is high quality learning experiences for all students, which are great, but I would, you know, if my colleagues agree, having this

[09:52:13] board on record that teachers should be provided with high quality instruction materials, just seems really important and sets a standard. So what's your language? Just those words, high-quality instructional materials. To go what? Oh, the curriculum selected by a local school board should provide a level of guidance, consistency, professional development, and high-quality instructional materials.

[09:52:37] And then to ensure high-quality learning? I'm happy to drop that because it is a little wordy. I'm certainly not against high-quality learning experiences. I just feel like that it caused confusion and there was, you know, all the stuff when it was in there that, but it's not about restricting teachers ability, but it's about making sure that all teachers, including on your first day on the job, you're going to be provided with high quality materials. So it would rain. Yes, the question then is, Andy, since that's a local control item, really, what do you do if they're not? Well, we say should. Yeah, you know what I'm saying. Yeah. I mean, here we're treading into, and I don't care

[09:53:16] if we leave it, but it gets us on record and we're moving that way with this, with the literacy act. Of course, you know, I think it gets us on record that we're serious about HQ, you know, high-quality materials. So it would read, the curriculum selected by a local school board should provide a level of guidance, consistency, professional development, and high-quality materials to ensure excellent learning experiences for all students.

[09:53:43] Yeah, or successful. Successful. But I, again, if my colleagues disagree, it's more to me that we get on record on the importance of high-quality materials. Period, and none of the rest of that, all the rest of that's all done. Yeah, got that? Yeah. can you read it once again so they have it the curriculum selected by a local school board should provide a level of guidance consistency professional development and high quality materials to ensure successful learning experiences for all students period i'm just going to go on record as saying thank you the only edit i have miss holton that you did not read is that i have

[09:54:23] high quality instructional material yeah it's high quality instructional materials oh yeah thank you right away on page seven well this one may be at the bottom we say parents have open access to all instruction materials i think they have a question before you continue one more time to be red blood sugar is low so yes jim you want to go you want me to i've got it the curriculum selected by a local school board should provide a level of guidance consistency and professional development and high quality instructional materials to ensure successful learning experiences for all students

[09:54:57] there's one extra and in there that could be a comma but otherwise that's good to go i'm trying to keep them short um we have a parent should have open access to all instructional materials utilizing i i would move we strike the word um open and the only reason is parents should have access i believe any parent the commonwealth should be able to see what's being taught but to me open implies like unfettered and we have like commercial vendors who we can't have people taking pictures if we if we want high quality materials we can't have people taking pictures of them for instance and um and so if we just put parents should have access rather i just feel like

[09:55:34] open conveys unilateral whereas access conveys you have a right to see it and in some places instructional materials can be qualified as assessments and assessments have security spaces so i would concur with that recommendation that word open just takes it a little further than i

[09:55:50] think we intend yeah i know why it's there but i certainly agree with the modification next so i just i had a comment about v18 just wanted to make sure that at least in the latter sentence

[09:56:23] we do our best to ensure that the journey of time feels like it captures all of the work that's been done around the standards and it just seemed to be rather abbreviated and i while i didn't offer language to that effect i just feel like it's important to ensure that the full period of time the revision process has been underway is adequately captured um i like to nod to the extensive feedback you know i think the public process was really well done by the by the staff

[09:57:00] and the way the first half of meetings were structured how they were run then how you took all that feedback and put it together and organized it so something yeah but there's a feedback i definitely not there but i'm too blurry-eyed right now towards me i think the the comment has language that the staff can use your comment is additional work by the department and extensive feedback from the public as part of the review process for these standards.

[09:57:31] That language can just get paid. Has resulted in an exceptional document. And I think you guys should put in something about the staff work because it's our document, and so we can say in our voice, like, really, you know, committed and, you know, very tireless staff work.

[09:57:48] In fact, instead of followed by additional work by the department, exceptional at the department staff. Would you accept that friendly amendment? Absolutely. by exceptional work by the department staff and it's now 7 30. all right you're right but you get the idea is it exceptional or is it superlative the exceptional staff wants to finish their work so they can go home and be back tomorrow write some wonderful lines about yourself all right so trying to restrict future ones to ones that really are going to be operational

[09:58:25] i would suggest that especially in light of where we landed on the grade four etc could use a little more clarification that in the organization and prescribed order of history and social science courses so where we say school divisions are strongly encouraged to adopt this sequence i would propose to add

comma but it is not mandatory and it we go on to say already local school boards that offer us alternative approaches must ensure gaps in student learning are avoided and make accommodations etc etc make a friendly amendment instead of not mandatory just not but

[09:59:00] not required i can live with that sound like the i like that great yes thank you anybody else does the team the team have that no yes i'm getting yes on one side and no on the other can we read it one more time and then the language that goes on there's some language that's highlighted but

[09:59:28] local school boards that authorize blah blah blah that sentence stays in all right that covers all of it okay 7 30. thank you thanks everybody thank you guys for stania and team for hanging with us through this incredibly excruciatingly painful process almost there chairman decker do you want want to say anything about Jenna's presentation tomorrow? Okay. We did it when we came back from [10:00:07] the break. All right, we're adjourned until tomorrow at nine.
